

New Office to Open for AWS Convention

Colleges to Send Delegates to UO For Convention

Because of the multitude of details connected with the AWS western section convention, women students are opening an office on the second floor of McArthur court and are employing a paid secretary to handle routine matter of the conference, announced Anne Fredriksen, western AWS president.

The new staff will begin work April 1 and will continue through the convention, Miss Fredriksen said. While the delegates are on the campus, the secretary will also handle the distribution of the visitors' mail and the information desk, she explained.

Already 22 colleges have paid their representative fees, signifying their intention of attending the gathering of girls from the 11 western states, stated Donna Ketchum, western AWS treasurer.

Those who have already sent in their dues, according to Miss Ketchum, are: Central Washington college, University of Utah, Pomona college, University of Idaho, Brigham Young university, University of Washington, Leland Stanford university, Montana State university, Colorado State college, State College of Washington, University of Denver, University of Nevada, University of Southern California, Santa Barbara State college, University of Arizona, Uni-

SDX Officially Opposes 'Green Goose' Publication

Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, officially went on record as opposed to any publication of an unauthorized Green Goose at the last meeting of the organization winter term.

The resolution as passed and presented to the administration reads as follows:

"Whereas certain rumors are current of the unauthorized publication of a scandal sheet, similar in form or substance to the Green Goose,

"Therefore, Sigma Delta Chi hereby goes on record as unqualifiedly opposed to any such unauthorized publication and formally instructs its members to abstain from any such activity."
