

This Week's Church News

By BETTY JANE THOMPSON

Hoping to help the different youth groups of the city to get better acquainted with one another, the Eugene Youth council, assisted by the campus Student Religious council and the Eugene Ministerial association, have planned an all-day youth emphasis program for Sunday.

John L. Casteel, head of the speech division, will speak at an 8 o'clock breakfast at McCrady's cafe. Several of the churches are planning special sermons or youth-participation programs in the morning.

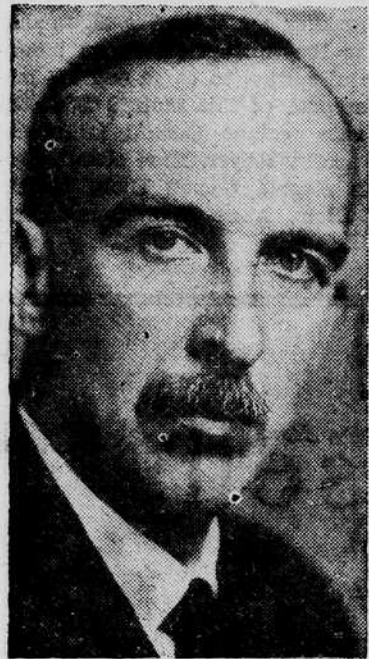

Following a social hour in Gerlinger hall from 4 to 5 p.m. Rev. Williston Wirt of the Congregational church will speak at a short vesper service.

Recently returned from a nine-months tour of Europe, the "Spiritual Jubilee Singers" of Chicago will sing at the Baptist church Sunday morning. Other appearances Sunday will be at 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday evenings they will sing at 8 o'clock. They will also sing over KORE at 8:30.

Review of the Kirby Page conference will be held at Wesley club at 7 o'clock Sunday evening. Reports of the conference will be given in a panel discussion. Election of officers will also be held.

Methodist Masquers will present the fifteenth century morality play, "Everyman," at Westminster house at 6:30 Sunday. Helen Sutherland will be in charge of a social hour at 6. Continuing the discussion of a philosophy of religion, Martin Walport will lead the 9:45 morning discussion group.

Libe Has Complete Magazine Files

The first Readers' Digest is the title earned by the early Gentleman's Magazine which was published first in January of 1731. The Library has all the issues of this curiously modern magazine which ceased publication in September 1907.

The Gentleman's Magazine or Monthly Intelligencer was published in London and had the longest life of any magazine even up to the present day. Interested in general current events, the magazine was about the size of the present Readers' Digest.

Campus Hears Music Concert Tuesday Night

Emerald's Effort Climaxed by Free Music Program

As a climax to the Emerald's efforts to bring the musical talents and facilities of the University to the attention of students, a free concert of the 70-piece University symphony orchestra will be given in the music auditorium Tuesday evening, April 23, it was announced last night by Rex Underwood, conductor.

The concert, which will be under the sponsorship of the Oregon Daily Emerald, will consist of the most popular selections offered by the orchestra in the 1939-40 series. All students of the University will be admitted free of charge. No student body ticket will be necessary for admission.

When the project was suggested to Mr. Underwood several weeks ago, he was enthusiastic about the idea, and said that he planned to express musically his thanks to the students for their support of his group. An informal answering of questions about the orchestra will also be a feature of the evening.

Further information about the concert and a complete program will be announced later, Mr. Underwood said.

'Let 'Em Die'

Parker McNeil plays, in the University theater's production of "Idiot's Delight," the part of patriotic Dr. Waldensee, who gives up his attempt to save the lives of countless humanity by finding a cure for cancer.

Sword Swallowing

baby tending, and window washing are listed among the means by which over a thousand Harvard boys earn their keep each year.

Registered at the employment office are a palmist, several blood donors, "Jeeves," a fake butler who makes amusing mistakes at dinner parties, and a human guinea pig, who swallows stomach pumps to enable biologists to experiment with his gastric juices.

Hot Time on Campus As Mercury Climbs to 85

Spring pounced upon the University of Oregon campus yesterday, and the quicksilver crawled up and danced around 85, highest for April since 1935.

Students shed a few clothes to alleviate and make less uncomfortable that tramp between afternoon classes. More fortunate ones sprawled among the daisies peeping up over the grass in various spots about the campus, missed by the WPA.

However, basking in the balmy spring sunshine may not yet supersede musing through slush as the popular Webfoot pastime. A glance at the barograph in the University's geography department showed the beginning of a "hole-in-the-road" effect signifying approach of a low pressure area, forerunner of rain.

Social Camp Work Offered Students

College students will be given a chance to study social problems close at hand at a Pacific Northwest work camp for immigrants from the dust bowl to be held July 22 to August 31.

The camp will be sponsored by the YMCA and the YWCA and will be constructed as a work project of the Federal Farm Security administration. Anyone interested in attending the camp, which will cost $35 for the six weeks, may get further details from Paul Sutley, YMCA secretary.

George Rebec Contest Open

To the University of Oregon undergraduate submitting the best essay on any philosophical topic on or prior to May 15, 1940 will be awarded the $25 George Rebec prize, according to word released by the philosophy department recently.

Not to exceed 10,000 words, the essay may be a discussion of any philosophical topic from any point of view, provided it gives evidence of adequate familiarity with the philosophical literature, historical and contemporary, on the subject chosen. It must be a unified treatment of a single topic and must be typed on one side of standard size paper.

Members of the philosophy department will confer with any wishing to compete for the prize concerning further particulars of the contest, which is open to all undergraduates.
