Ex Com Gives 11 Letters to UO Swimmers

Committee Vetoes Trip for 'Ideal' University Coed

The executive committee cleaned up a full docket of other business in addition to its momentous decision awarding student body membership with the $2 compulsory activities fee.

In chronological order, the first item on the schedule was swimming awards. Letters were granted ten men upon the recommendation of Coach Russ Cutler. Those winning letters were: Jerry Macdonald, Jack Dallas Sherm Wetmore, Jim Marnie, Pierce Mallory, Al Sandner, Ralph Cathey, Ralph Lafferty, Gerald Huestis, and Dick Smith.

Next item was the fee question. After that the committee voted negatively on a proposition from the University of Washington to send a University of Oregon "ideal girl" to a festival at the Washington campus. The proposition was turned down on the grounds that it would be too late in the term—May 17—that there would be no particular advantage derived, and that there might be difficulty encountered in the selection.

Also sunk without a trace was the proposed University of Oregon Rose festival float. The lateness in the term, the fact that the University band would not be available, and the information that some of the other large schools would not have entries, combined to defeat the proposition.

The model, standard class constitution which has been in the process of drafting for some time appeared at the meeting, together with a very business like report from Phil Lowry, chairman of the drafting committee. However, the committee thought it best to study the instrument and have several copies made before doing anything further about it.

ence match on its home course, and Oregon State is the team to beat as the northern division championship tournament will be played in Corvallis.

Leading Oregon's singles players will be Captain-coach Doc Near. Near was a member of last year's team and turned in low score for the qualifying round this year. Benny Hughes will be the No. 2 singles player, and Rich Werschkul will be No. 3. Both Hughes and Werschkul won three points when they played the Huskies, Werschkul being the day's medalist. Bob Engelke, Chuck Phipps, and Don Cawley will take care of the last three positions.

Duden Top Man

In the morning doubles Bob Skelly and Chet Keller will play the third doubles team. Near and Werschkul will be the first team and Hughes and Phipps the second. Both Skelly and Keller are reserves.

In the frosh-rook battle, Hal Duden will be top man for the frosh. Dick Hanen will be No. 2, Francis Jordan No. 3, and Bill McMahon No. 4. Clay Jones and Neil Huckleberry will be in the last two positions.

Musical Notes Emerald Staff Scribes' Bonus

"Is that symphony concert that the Emerald is sponsoring next Tuesday night really free?"

That question is asked her over the telephone at least a dozen times a day, according to Gladys W. Hay, secretary in the University music school.

"Yes, it won't cost you a cent," Mrs. Hay patiently tells her student interrogators. "I guess it's the Emerald's spring bonus to all its faithful readers and supporters."

Larry Key Makes

(Please turn to page seven)

"I swam for the Pi Kap swimming team," Larry said, "but I guess I didn't swim fast enough!"

Only 19 years old, Larry is majoring in business and hopes to graduate from Oregon, then enter his father's business. His father's business consists of managing two orange groves, a cemetery, a fumigating association, a lemon exchange, and working as an auditor, so Larry hasn't exactly decided which phase of his versatile father's business he will enter as yet.

W. F. G. Thacher, professor of advertising, has just received an exhibit of the four-color process of photo engraving from Hicks-Chatten and Company.

The exhibit will be located in the school of journalism for the use of the classes in publishing and advertising production.

Announcers for Fete Selected

Lillian Davis, Jim Davidson, Dolph Janes Win Posts

Two boys and a girl—Dolph Janes, Jim Davidson, and Lillian Davis—were yesterday selected as announcers for the Junior Weekend canoe fete.

Chosen from a list of 27 who signed up for tryouts, one boy will carry background description in the script, and the other boy and Miss Davis will do dialogue parts.

Judges were H. H. Hanna, instructor in speech, W. B. Nash, instructor in drama, and Marvin Krenk, of the speech department.

Selections were made by the judges on the basis of finding a suitable voice to carry out the canoe fete story, which deals with two mythical characters, Hans and Lizzy, who lived in Vienna in the time of Johann Strauss. Contestants read excerpts from the script which is to be used.

Fred Ehlers, canoe fete chairman, Donna Ketchum, and Pat Erickson, co-chairman of the entertainment committee, made arrangements for the tryouts which were given in the radio room.

Prize of $10 Up for Best Law School Weekend Theme

Retired Judge R. L. Recken, Portland, has put up a $10 award which will be given to the student offering the law school the best theme for their "Junior Weekend" this year.

The weekend is fashioned after the junior class Junior Weekend with the one difference that a parade will replace the canoe float event. A dance will be held on the evening of May 4 to climax the annual event.

For their parade, the law school wishes to enlist the services of a commentator. One of the qualifications for the post, Hugh Collins says, is incoherence of continuity. Those who wish this position, or who wish to suggest a theme, should contact Collins or Bill Lubersky, publicity committee members for the weekend.

Birthday Fete On Libe Slate

Third Anniversary To Be Celebrated By Book Displays

In joint commemoration of the invention of printing 500 years ago and the third birthday of their $500,000 structure, the staff of the University of Oregon library will hold an open-house party on May 3, according to Matthew H. Douglass, librarian.

Exhibits of old books, especially those showing the early history of printing, and displays of newspapers and books printed during the last century in Oregon and revealing many of the events that went into building up the state, will be the main theme of the celebration. Old textbooks, maps, early Oregon imprints, newspapers, student libraries, and microfilm, the latest device for preserving newspapers, will be displayed so that friends of the University may view them during the afternoon and evening.

The half-million dollar library was opened May 3, 1937. On its first anniversary the Nash collection of fine books was opened. Last year the library held open-house with displays of rare books and other exhibits.
