

Women Will Gain Rightful Place, Says Mrs. Honeyman

By BETTY JANE THOMPSON

Women will come into their own. But it will be through something like a woman's crusade for women, declared Nan Wood Honeyman in speaking on "Women in Public Life" at last night's annual Matrix Table.

Natural is the refusal to accept women as equals with men, because their entrance into public life is comparatively recent, she said. The biggest problem now, declared Mrs. Honeyman, is to get women to tell themselves to each other.

Terminating the gaining of recognition for women as a "cause," Mrs. Honeyman said that it would be the women who would go to the bat for themselves. History shows, said the speaker, that most causes have been put over by fanatics, and women can be the best fanatics when they want to be.

The lack of confidence in themselves may be one explanation for the slow recognition of women, Mrs. Honeyman said. But women do have considerable power and prestige despite their relative obscurity, she declared. Speaking of her experience in congress, Mrs. Honeyman said that one member requested the support of five women members of the house saying that if his measure had the united support of the women as had a previous successful venture, it would be passed. A curiosity, too, are women, the speaker said. Upon learning that she was a congresswoman, not a congressman's wife, a Washington, D. C., dentist awfully stated, "I've never seen one of those before."

Giving a negative reply to the question regarding women running a house and having a career at the same time, Mrs. Honeyman said that one person who waited for her family to grow up before starting her political career can't be in two places at once.

Introduced to the 140 women present were the five girls chosen as outstanding women in journalism on the campus and in the high schools. Coming from Marquette to attend her first banquet, Olive Barber, columnist for one of the local papers, was introduced to the group by Catherine Taylor, president of Theta Sigma Phi. Characterizing her as one of the "changers" as distinguished from the "conservers," Mrs. Eric W. (Sally) Allen introduced Mrs. Honeyman.

Wayne Satchwell Addresses Class On Care of Blind

Wayne Satchwell, relief administrator for Jefferson county, spoke at the Wednesday meeting of Dr. E. H. Moore's class in poverty and dependency on "Provision for the Blind in Oregon."

Satchwell outlined the different provisions now made for the blind in Oregon, explained the difficulty in determining the exact number of blind, and told of the attempts to place the blind in self-supporting jobs.

Satchwell has recently completed a thesis at the University on the care of the blind.

Following their arrival a special luncheon will be given in their honor at Perlyon hall, in the heart of the fair activity. Finally the women chairmen will be given special seats for the opening ceremonies of the fair.

After the meeting of the Oregon group in Portland, Wednesday, 25 of the members were taken for a half-hour courtesy flight over Portland, Oswego, and a short way up the Columbia river. Dean Schwering and Assistant Dean Alice Macduff were among those going on the plane trip.

THE COLUMBIA EMPIRE GET YOUR "PROSPERITY QUIZ" BLANK FROM US

Columbia Empire Industries, Inc., introduce another "Buy To Work, Work To Buy" program with a "Prosperity Quiz" contest.

A $200 cash award is the first grand prize. Other grand prizes are: A complete suite of Fashion Flow, "America's Smartest Furniture"; a complete paint job and roofing material for your house; a Fowler automatic electric hot water tank; and a week's vacation at The Tides, Seaside. Twenty-two additional assorted prizes are offered to contestants in the "Prosperity Quiz."

To enter, contestants must get a free entry blank from local merchants, bankers, insurance men, or the OREGON DAILY EMERALD business office. These blanks give contest rules and lists of prizes.

Then entrants must write in 100 words or less "I should buy Columbia Empire products because . . ." The judges will consider the idea expressed and not literary style. In addition the contestant is to name products of the Columbia Empire in spaces provided on the entry blank.

When the entry blank has been filled out, it must be turned in to the OREGON DAILY EMERALD business office not later than midnight, May 15. District prizes will be awarded May 22, and winners of grand prizes will be announced June 5.

Contest judges will be Elvina Large, mayor of Eugene; W. F. G. Thacher, professor of advertising of the University, and Dale Cooley, advertising manager of Miller's.

'Sunlight Serenade'

(Continued from page one) Dedicated especially for UO mothers, the serenade was heard for the last time two years ago, Miss Neely said. Concerted student demand is responsible for its return to the campus this year, she asserted.

Informal The spirit at the afternoon musical will be decidedly informal, with officially Junior Weekend dressed coeds receiving the mothers. The committee has tentatively decided to serve cookies and punch at round group tables.

"We don't want anyone to neglect Sunlight Serenade in anticipation of the canoe fete the same night," Miss Neely said. "Junior Weekend is very fortunate to have the services of the concert band, under the direction of John Stehn, for it is reputed by many to be the outstanding musical group of its kind on the coast."

Japan's a Man's

(Continued from page one) until 2 o'clock in the morning with Ise Inuzuka, senior in sociology, with whom she is visiting on the campus, was rapidly helping her to re-acquire her American accent.

Miss Tsuboi entered the life in the old-traditional country and during her stay there, she wore the traditional kimono attire, but a different hair-do. She confessed that when she first went over an "older person" asked her to remove her nailpolish.

The war has caused little changes among the Japanese college students, Miss Tsuboi seemed to think, except that they must look forward to their turn on the front when their school days are over.

Miss Tsuboi will leave today to return to her parent's home in Portland.
