

Seabeck Co-op Organizing Here

Funds Will Help YM-YWCA Meet Students to Attend

To make it financially possible for more students to attend the YM-YWCA student Christian conference at Seabeck, Washington, a Seabeck co-op is being organized on the Oregon campus. Virginia James, YWCA chairman of the movement, announced last night.

Members of the group will raise funds collectively and divide the profits, which are to go toward the $16 charge for the one-week convention June 8 to 16.

Prominent leaders and speakers at the Seabeck conference include Dr. T. Z. Koo, Shanghai, of the World Student Christian federation, Dr. Arnold Nash, London, general secretary of the Church of England moral welfare council; Dr. Roland Elliott, New York, national executive secretary of the student YMCA, and Dr. J. R. Branton from this campus.

Last year delegates attended Seabeck from every living organization on the University of Washington campus, many of whom were financially aided by the Seabeck co-op there. Chairman James pointed out.

Oregon students interested in taking part in this project should contact either Miss James or Henry Carr, the YMCA representative.

Pacific Coast Co-ops Will Meet at Oregon

Student cooperative organizations on this campus become guest conscious the week after school is out in June when they will be hosts to delegates to the annual Pacific Coast student cooperative conference from June 11 to 15, reports Carl Proding, manager of the student cooperative association on the campus.

An organized committee is now scheduling speakers and students to take part in panel discussions centering around problems of student co-ops such as those in membership, government, and cooperative educational programs.

The purpose of the meeting, says Proding, is to give the organization from different localities and under different conditions a chance to exchange their ideas and methods.

Last year representatives from student co-ops came to the coast meeting at Berkeley, California, from many parts of the west and as far east as Texas.

Clara Hatton Book Collection to Be Displayed at Libe

The book collection of Clara Hatton, assistant professor in charge of art at Colorado State college, will be a featured display in the circulation lobby of the University library on Library day, Friday. Miss Hatton has done the complete binding, mending, edge-gilding, forwarding, and finishing of the 16 books by hand.

Numerous novel types of leather are used in the binding of the books such as various colors of oasis morocco, Niger kid, sheep, and goat. The lettering of "A Fragment of Essay of Fame" by Francis Bacon has been done entirely by hand.

Miss Hatton employs a great deal of gold tooling and has illustrated the cover of "Fables" by Scheedrin with two rabbits. In London Miss Hatton studied book production at the Central School of Arts and Crafts.

Dr. Morris Attends Dean Convention

Dr. Victor F. Morris, dean of the University of Oregon school of business administration, returned last weekend from a two-week tour of the Southwest.

Dr. Morris attended the national convention of deans of schools of business administration at the University of Texas in Austin.

Phi Thetas Take 29 Sophs

Outstanding Coeds Pledged to Third Year Honorary

Twenty-nine sophomore women were pinned with the black and white ribbons, pledging them as members next year of Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's honorary, at the ASUO assembly yesterday in Gerlinger hall.

President Majeane Glover named the girls who received blue and yellow corsages from Mrs. Hazel P. Schwering, dean of women, and the pledge ribbon from Betty Buchanan, vice-president of the organization.

Initiates into Phi Theta will receive the official pins and degrees at 4:30 Friday afternoon at the Delta Gamma house, followed by a banquet in their honor.

Honorable mention went to four sophomore girls who had done outstanding work during this year but who would not be on the campus next year. They were: Barbara Bamford, Jean Haehlen, Elna Johnson, and Margaret Young.

Columbia Quiz Gets Aid, Emerald Finds

A check-up of Eugene representatives of the Emerald found that business men, retailers, and consumers alike are cooperating to make the Columbia Empire 1940 Prosperity Quiz the most productive get-acquainted campaign of any year.

Instructions received by district judges, Mayor Large, Professor Thacher, and Dayle Cooley provide for an unusual method of awarding the prizes. The winning entry judged as No. 1 will have first choice of any of the district prizes; winning entry No. 2 will have second choice; and so on until all the prizes have been given out.

All prize winning entries from this district will have a chance to compete in the area-wide grand prize contest under the grand contest judges who will be named at a later date.

Special to Be Green

Oregon's Daily Emerald will be dyed green when the special Junior Weekend edition comes off the press May 10, according to George Luoma, the paper's business manager.

It will also carry a special four-page white insert section with Junior Weekend features.
