

1940 Oregana Distribution Set For May 8, 9, 13

Students Who Fail To Get Books Now Must Wait Till Fall

The distribution date of the 1940 Oregana has been officially set as May 8, according to Dick Williams, business manager. Books will also be distributed on May 9 and after that date no books will be available until the following Monday, May 13.

The date set for delivering the Oreganas is the earliest in many years as it is desired to deliver as many as possible before Junior Weekend actually starts.

Copies to Order

Another point that Manager Williams stressed is that students that are in school this term and do not pick their copies up before the end of the school year, will have to wait until fall term of next year to receive their books as no copies will be sent during the summer.

Although all the copies have been sold at the present time, students wishing to order a copy and in the event of some cancellations, being able to purchase one, may do so by paying the full price of $5.50 to Williams and being placed on a waiting list. If there are no books available then the money will be returned.

Orides Organize Club for Mothers

Approximately 30 mothers of Orides members met in Gerlinger alumni room Monday evening and organized an Orides Mothers club. The election succeeded a pot luck dinner at which the mothers were guests. Guests of honor included Mesdames E. E. DeCou, Alice Macduff, Edith Seifert, Mary Farr, and Miss Janet Smith.

Rebecca Anderson, Orides president, gave the welcome speech which was answered by Mrs. A. H. Pengra, newly elected president of the mothers. Master of ceremonies for the program was Carol Bird.

This is the first club of this kind to be organized by mothers of the six-year-old organization for independent women.

In the weekly drill points are given to the OTC students for outstanding appearance, with special emphasis on gleaming belts and shoes. Demerits are given for unshaven faces, unpolished shoes, and for misconduct in the ranks.

Officers in charge of Company E are: Company Commander Robert Jolly, and Platoon Leaders David Aronson, William Jackson, and Dwight Near.

'Pinafore Day' Set For Next Monday

Monday won't be a blue day, Joan Hoke, in charge of campus costumery for Junior Weekend, promised last night. It will be "Pinafore Day," when the Viennese-fashioned dresses will make their official debut upon the University campus.

"We want all the girls who already have their pinafores to wear them," Miss Hoke said, "but we feel that some are waiting for others to start the parade. We decided that a good day to officially break them in would be Monday." Miss Hoke has appointed chairmen in each of the women's houses, whose duty will be to take orders for the pinafores.

Annual Law Parade Threatened; No Caps

A landlady's threat to detain 25 painter's caps in lieu of unpaid rent has the law school in a dither. It is the school's tradition for each member to wear a painter's cap in their annual parade which comes Saturday afternoon.

The 25 caps now lacking are in the possession of two of their members, Kenneth Abraham and Addison Wood. But they won't be able to get them until they pay their rent, say the law school mourners.

Meanwhile, preparations proceed for the biggest, best, and "baddest" parade ever, with the theme changed to "Hawaiian Knights," and plans almost materializing for the queen and her princesses to wear grass skirts. In this event, the rest of the law school will carry lawn mowers, says Princess Kenneth (Abraham).

The four princesses, Princess Kenneth and Princesses Addison (Wood), "Buffalo" (Phipps), and "Thermous" (R. L. Recken), and Queen Meyer (Kroopnick) have adopted as their motto, "Virtue, virginity, fraternity."

Another unsolved worry is the fact that the B.A. school hasn't answered the complaint filed last Tuesday. In case the challenge to a baseball game isn't answered by Friday noon, the game scheduled for Saturday afternoon will be forfeited to the law school under Oregon laws, says Hugh Collins, publicity committee member for the law school.

"We don't think they're going to answer, personally," says Collins. "We don't think they have what it takes."

The law school team is being trained by Player-coach George Goodrich, ex-Sacramento professional third baseman. The coach, who was brought here on a scholarship by the school, according to Collins, claims he has the best players on the campus with such stars as David Silver and Jack Hay booming out plenty of hits in practice sessions.

Morse to Speak

Dean Wayne L. Morse was in Portland last night to lead a discussion of the Portland public policy committee on "The Waterfront Labor Situation."

The committee is headed by C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter, weekly public political interest publication.
