

Gurley to Head Ticket Drive

Athletic Ducats to Replace Former ASUO Card; Concerts, Voting to Be Included in Registration Fee

With Joe Gurley at the head of the drive, Oregon's first attempt to sell $9 all-year "athletic tickets" to students will be launched at registration September 25.

Under the new state board ruling, regular educational activities privileges—concerts, voting, etc.—will be included in the fee payment at registration. The athletic card will replace the old $15 ASUO card, and will entitle the holder to attend all games during the year.

Gurley's chief aides in selling the tri-season ducats to students are to be Kenneth Erickson, Billie Christensen, and Louis Torgerson. House representatives have been named in each living organization.

No term-to-term cards will be used, although students who enroll later in the year may obtain special tickets. For fall term enrollees, a $9 ticket will be sold, covering the whole year's activities. If paid for during fall term registration, the $9 ducat entitles holders to a $1 discount on the Oregana. However an installment payment method may be arranged.

If gate admissions are paid for all contests, Gurley stated, the student without a season card will pay $23.60 for the year's athletic program.

After registration a special inter-house contest will be staged, with prizes going to best day-to-day salesmen and to the first houses to go 100 per cent on athletic card sales. The drive will last one week.

Named by Gurley and Student Body Prexy Tiger Payne to handle the contest in living organizations are the following undergraduates:

Increase in Flight School Held Possible

Oregon May Get Two-Term Course, CAA Head Says

While 60 summer school students wound up their special course in flying instruction, Flight Head Carlton E. Spencer announced fall term plans for instruction to as many as possible of the 160 applicants who have signed up for the CAA course this fall.

The summer school enrollment of 60 birdmen was the maximum permitted any college. During the school year 50 students took the flying course, which was the largest CAA enrollment in the seventh region, the Pacific coast area.

Spencer suggested that a possible solution to the extra-large enrollment may be the division of the course into two sections of about 50 each, so that a larger group may be handled for the flying instruction. Advanced training may possibly be offered to last year's students, he said.

University students who take the work, consisting of ground training and solo flying, must be American citizens and should have completed their freshman year of college. A physical examination is also provided.

Interested students may contact Mr. Spencer for further information.

Stehn Calls for Future Bandsmen

An early call for all prospective band members was issued last night by Director John Stehn when he asked that all interested in playing in the football band contact him as soon as possible after school opens.

"The band will be greatly enlarged this year and we want everyone who can play an instrument at our first turnout," Stehn said.

Included in the band's schedule, beside playing at all home football games, is a trip to Portland for the Oregon-Washington game.
