

Tryouts Slated For Symposium

Men to Compete For Positions On 1940 Team

All men students interested in trying for a berth on the 1940 men's symposium team will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, October 9, in Room 107 Friendly hall.

According to Professor W. A. Dahlberg of the speech department, supervisor of the symposium, freshmen, as well as any other interested students, are urged to try out for a position in this group.

Judging Points Listed

Each entrant will speak for three minutes on any topic of his own choice. These talks will be judged by the following points: the voice of the speaker; the general appearance of the speaker; the substance of the talk; the attitude of the speaker toward the work; and special consideration will be given to those contestants who express a genuine interest in the training that this activity provides.

The members chosen for the symposium will probably spend the fall term doing varied research in the field that is chosen as this year's symposium subject. Following the Christmas holidays, the students prepare speeches from the data gathered in their research work.

Team to Tour Oregon

About the middle of January, the men's symposium team will deliver speeches before audiences in every part of the state of Oregon.

Last year the University of Oregon symposium men spoke before 110 different audiences. These included granges, service clubs, churches, high schools, other col-

Emerald Process To Be Pictured

A complete record of the Emerald from its inception as a news story to the printed paper will be included in a movie of Emerald life to go into production early in November, according to Ted Kenyon, Emerald photo editor.

The movie to be called "Headlines and Deadlines" will be sponsored by the Emerald and will be presented to high schools and other civic organizations throughout the state after its release after the first of the year.

"The film will run for 25 or 30 minutes and will embody many of the latest techniques in movie making," Kenyon stated.

Don Jones will assist Kenyon in the actual production, while Roy Vernstrom will act as advisor.

Dean Allen Talks To Rotary Club

Journalism Head Speaks on Papers' History Since 1609

In recognition of this week, which has been designated as National Newspaper week, Dean Eric W. Allen of the University school of journalism, spoke at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Rotary club at the Osburn hotel, on newspaper advancement during the past centuries.

Commenting briefly on the history of newspapers since 1609, Dean Allen traced the progress of newspapers during the past centuries to preserve the spark of freedom and independence native to the human race, and emphasized that the spirit of the publications has always been that neither the church nor the state can authoritatively tell the individual what he can say or think.

Starting with the persecutions of the pamphleteers and the struggle for individual freedom in the seventeenth century, he discussed the period of thriving for newspapers in the 1640's, and works of Joseph Addison, and Addison's American admirer, Benjamin Franklin.

Other prominent workers in the journalistic field were also introduced at the meeting, and Dr. Fred Miller, director of the student health service was named as a new member of the Rotary club.

Emerald Duties Explained To Frosh

Emerald executives were introduced to freshman journalism students last night at the first Emerald staff meeting of the term. Lyle Nelson, editor, introduced members of the upper news staff who gave short talks on their fields.

Nelson outlined the major duties of the reporting, desk and night staffs with emphasis on the value of the Emerald to students interested in journalism. He described the work necessary to earn an "Emerald certificate" and the "Emerald 'O'."

Jimmie Leonard, managing editor, gave a short talk on the opportunities open to freshmen.

Kent Stitzer, news editor, explained the work of the reporters, copy editors and night staff. He cautioned new reporters to "be aware of politicians and publicity seekers."

Students who desired positions on the staff filled out applications, stating the positions they desired and previous newspaper experience they had had.

HOW TO WATCH A FOOTBALL GAME

Do you watch the ball on kicks? Punts? Forward passes?
(Experts say you should not!)

If your team is kicking from behind its own goal, do you watch your team? Or the opponents?

Are you always missing the referee's signals?

What player do coaches agree is most exciting to watch?

You'll get twice as much fun out of a football game if you let Referee William H. (Red) Friesell tell you where to park your eye from play to play. Get your copy of this week's Saturday Evening Post and turn to page 36.
