

Speakers Must Register Soon

Symposium Teams Slated to Start Research Work

Friday afternoon will mark the close of registration for work with the University symposium teams.

Women and men symposium groups are open to students interested in speech research work and actual presentation. As in the past symposium teams will represent the University throughout the northwest on a series of lecture tours.

W. A. Dahlberg will handle the men's group which will consider the various phases of national politics. The women, coached by Marvin Krenk, will consider the value of University education to the women of today.

The teams after a term of research and preparation will be prepared to travel and address organizations on their selected subjects. Last year the group addressed 110 audiences.

Interested students should contact the coaches at the speech division. Previous speech experience is unnecessary, according to the coaches.

Big 'Laddie' Gale Gets First Call In Draft Lottery

Maybe it's because his six feet four inches are as conspicuous as a totem pole in a toothpick factory, but Lauren "Laddie" Gale, Oregon '39, was the first man from board one in Lane county to be summoned in the draft as officials in Washington, D. C., drew the capsule containing his number—158—from the "fishbowl" yesterday.

As the same numbers were issued in each district in the country, Laddie was first simultaneously with other 158s all over the nation. Gale, who is now running a downtown service station with former teammate Urgan "Slim" Wintermute, was chosen NEA All-American forward for his work on Oregon's 1939 national championship basketball team.

Although Oregon students may find themselves selected in the first drawing, they can claim exemption automatically provided they have enrolled before January 1, 1941. They will not be called before July 1, 1941.

Leeper Discusses Hitler's Program

Dr. Robert Leeper, assistant professor of psychology, spoke in Portland Monday evening as a member of a panel on the subject, "Personality Development as Illustrated by Hitler, Goering, and Goebbels." Dr. Leeper's specific topic was Hitler.

The panel discussion was part of the 1940 lecture series on "The Psychology of Personality Development" which is sponsored by the Oregon Mental Hygiene society.

In his speech Dr. Leeper stressed the reasons why Hitler's program had appealed to the German people, while the same theories have made little impression in the United States. Dr. Leeper declared that it was a patriotic move and appeal to Germans' devotion to their country. Also, experience had taught them that force was the only method by which they could get desired concessions.

Dr. Leeper emphasized the point that the education of the Germans teaches them to obey—not think. He remarked that the Nazi regime had recognized a weakness in democracy in that individualism was sometimes stressed to such a point that it injured the general social well-being.

HOPE THE BEDS ARE LONG

When Hery L. Stinson, secretary of war, drew the first number—158—in the national draft lottery yesterday, Laddie Gale, ex-Oregon basketball star, learned that his was the first number. Members of the world's champion basketball team of 1939, Laddie and Slim Wintermute are operating a service station in Eugene.

Alum County Board To Meet on Campus

The first annual meeting of the county board of directors of the Oregon Alumni association will be held here November 9, according to Elmer Fansett, alumni secretary.

Hollis Johnston, acting president, will preside at the meeting. Johnston is vice-president but because President Del Stanard, with the national guard, has been acting head of the organization.

"We hope that a large majority of the directors will be able to attend the meeting," stated Fansett. "And according to reports received, it looks as if most of the directors will come."

The directors of the association are: Kessler Cannon, Crook county; George Stadelman, Wasco; Pete Lauers, Clackamas; Harris Ellsworth, Douglas; Ralph Cronise, Linn; Merle Chessman, Clatsop; Spike Leslie, Coos; Forrest Cooper, Lake; Dr. Clariel Ogle, Josephine; Dr. A. B. Starbuck, Polk; Larry Hull, Lincoln; Charles Erwin, Umatilla; Don McCormick, Multnomah; and Ray Williams, Union.

Traditions

"The sixth tradition, no smoking on the old part of the campus, will be observed from University street to Kincaid and between 11th and 13th streets. Tin pants for the frosh and moleskins or blue jeans for sophomores were designated as most members of these two classes are already supplied with this traditional class wear," Jim Rathbun, Order of the "O" president, said last night.

Lettermen to Check

"The observance of this second coming of campus traditions will be checked on by the Order of the 'O' men," Jim Rathbun asserted. Lists of offenders will be published in the Emerald each morning. Those on the lists will gather on the steps of Fenton hall at 12:45 each day for the "traditional" punishment. Those whose names are on the list who fail to appear will be tracked down and punishment to fit the crime will be meted out on the spot, according to the rules as laid down by the Homecoming committeemen.

Midland college faculty members traveled an average of almost 2,000 miles on lecture tours and convention trips during the last school semester.

Annual Contest Gets Under Way

Entry Deadline Set by Committee For Saturday Noon

"All ideas for signs to be entered in the Homecoming sign contest must be submitted to the University of Oregon alumni office by noon, Saturday, November 2, it was announced Monday.

Living organizations will submit their ideas to the office where they will be inspected by the committee. If it is found that any two or more organizations have submitted the same idea, the committee will notify the contestants. The organization turning in the idea first will be allowed to keep their theme.

Limit Expenses
An expense limit of $15 for the construction of signs has been announced by the committee. All organizations must make a budget which will be turned in the day following the judging. If it is found that any organization has exceeded the limit, they will be disqualified.

"This year," stated Al Gray, committee chairman, "the contest will have two prizes instead of the usual one. In the past the cup has been offered to the sign adjudged best from the men's and women's living organizations, but this year we are giving a cup to the best women's sign as well as one for the men."

Last year's winner, Theta Chi, will have permanent possession of the cup as they have won the contest three years in a row.

Despite this revelation of Montana might, Oregon's Webfooters looked slightly on the not-so-sharp side as they splashed around in practice last night. Coach Tex Oliver threw two teams at the frosh ball club and the best the big boys could do was a 7 to 6 win before darkness blackened out the field.

For Men Only

The west coast, the war, and the English schoolboy, are having a great deal of influence this fall on what the college man wears about the campus, in classes, and over the weekends.

The same trend to more comfort and relaxed informality that made such strong headway in colleges and universities last year is even more pronounced this fall. This trend is emphasized by the increased use of color in all clothes—formal and informal—which, after a good many years of getting no further than the "fad" stage, now seems to have taken a secure hold.

Important Point
The important point about the arrival of color on both the campus and business scene this fall is that it is like the famed monkey of legend who painted his tail sky blue... neat but not gaudy... and the most popular shades for the 1940-41 season are brown, green, and blue, with some off-reds and grays.

Carrying on in even greater favor than last year is the plaid jacket, with the plaids bigger and more colorful than ever before. Rough materials, long a favorite of midwestern and west coast collegians, have gone east to stay.

And one of this year's fall and winter favorites in American colleges is the camel's hair "shorty," or not-quite-knee-length sport topcoat. This number has extra large pockets, equipped with slide fastenings inside, big enough to hold books and accumulated odds and ends.

Plaid Jacket
Worn with the plaid jacket this fall are covert slacks, which are gaining preference over the favored gray flannels, and the solid-color pull-over wool sweater, with or without sleeves, and matching wool tie. This sweater-vest has been popular for a number of years among university men.

Topcoats this fall also continue last year's trend to shortness with large pockets. The favorite throughout Western colleges and universities is the single-breasted fly-front with peaked lapels, worn as a complimentary item with the single-breasted peaked-lapel suit.

Still Conservative
Footwear is still conservative for the most part, with the shoes in the brown and practically staple bootmaker finish. Argyle and wool socks in plain color continue to dominate.

Plaid and striped wool ties are more popular than ever because of the lasting value, and they offer a greater style variety than last year. Browns and yellows and blues and greens are the favorites in plaids. Narrow stripes and heather mixtures run the plaids a close second.

The same felt hat with the "quadrangular" crease, which has been popular with collegians, for more than ten years, is still seen to the exclusion of all other types for day-in-day-out wear. The predominant shade this fall, as it was before college let out in the spring, is khaki—which may or may not be the military influence.

Warmth Without Weight

In style for the coming holidays. That means you'll want to be wearing one of these new top coats. The coat illustrated above is destined to be one of the leading styles of the season.
