

Duck Tracks

By KEN CHRISTIANSON, Co-Editor of Sports

Hayward field's thin coating of water-logged turf will be torn up this afternoon following the Montana-Oregon football game, and no small part of the ripping will be done by one group of Montana players from the high country around Missoula.

One lad who does most of the ripping for the Grizzlies, Halfback Bill Jones, won't be performing, though. He's Coach Doug Fessenden's No. 1 back and he had a couple of blood vessels broken in the Gonzaga game, so he was left home. Jones started most of the games, although Fessenden believes in using many backs.

Fessenden has a squad this year which is mostly sophomore. He loses only four men from the entire team, and since the average age is 20, he'll lose very few because of the Burke-Wadsworth act. To top that, his team is not one of the imported variety. Ninety-five per cent of the squad is from the state of Montana.

Jack Swarthout, 166-pound first string blocker, is from Prosser, Washington. He was starting left half last year. Negro Johnny Reagan is from Chicago. He and Don Bryan do most of the passing along with the absent Jones. Tom O'Donnell, captain and tackle, is from Casper, Wyoming which is the next thing to Montana.

Outplayed Cougars
Two years ago, Fessenden lost

all of his squad, and he has been building since. Next year he expects a good club. But with this sophomore outfit, he hasn't done badly. Against Washington State, the Montanans made more yardage and more first downs, they doubled the yardage on Gonzaga, and were soundly beaten by Texas Tech. WSC scored 17 first downs to Oregon's 3.

"Oregon should beat us," declared Fessenden. "They have a little more weight in the line, and much more in the backfield. The Oregon boys have all had a year or so more of experience."

One of Fessenden's fullbacks, Karl Fiske, never saw a game of football until last year when he was a freshman.

"Even at that we should give Oregon a good game," predicted Fessenden, as he took short puffs from a stubby cigar.

Bill Robertson, Grizzly guard, was much impressed by the green vegetation in and around the Willamette valley. He impressed others with his remarkable resemblance to Oregon's Rog Johnson, except that Johnson packs a few more pounds on his frame.

"They're catching all their passes now, and they'll probably miss them tomorrow," ironically remarked Harry Adams, backfield coach, as his backs made numerous completions Friday.

But no matter what, Montana will be a threat today.

Brace and All
John Warren takes his freshmen to Seattle and also a complicated metal and leather brace which fits over his injured left leg. But come next Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, he'll take off the contraption and not have to hobble around in teaching football to those same frosh.

"My knee feels stronger all the time, but the doc was afraid that if I took the brace off before the Babe game, I'd jump around and get excited in Seattle and hurt the knee again," explained Warren. So until next week, Warren will still hobble like Tubby Graves did last year during the baseball season. Graves is Washington's baseball headman and had an injury similar to John's cracked kneecap.

Warren isn't exactly taking his 26 ball players into a den of lions without knowing something about them. Being a firm believer in the proverb "to be forewarned is to be forearmed," Warren knows much of the ball-playing ability of the Washington Babes from end to end and back to back with all of the players' idiosyncrasies.

Drives Like Dow
This Wally Wan of the three nationalities, Swedish, Chinese, and Hawaiian, is the No. 1 back from Honolulu. His substitute is Neil Brookes, fullback from Great Falls, Montana. He is short and square like his prototype, Kenny Dow of Oregon State and Great

Olivermen Seek Second Victory Of Grid Season

Muddy Field Gives Heavier Ducks Big Edge Over Visitors

Certain to see much action for Oregon is Halfback Tommy Roblin, already dubbed hero of the Washington State game. Roblin, though not too big, is difficult to bring down. He has a jarring stiff-arm, a good change of pace, and a technique all his own of bolting out of the clutches of would-be tacklers.

If Oliver instructs his boys not to take too many chances by running with a slippery ball, Isberg will probably come in for some heavy punting assignments.

Back in the line after some tough luck so far this season will be Stuart. It seems he has not had a chance to strut his stuff since the Stanford game, having been booted in the head then and later injuring his hip in practice.

Rog Johnson should be right in there pitchin' mud when and if the going gets rough. He is as rugged as they make them, and played 60 minutes against the Washington Huskies in Portland.

Segale, Culwell, and Davis will also be doing some booming around from their guard positions.

Falls, and only knows how to drive, drive, drive, and drive some more.

Darwin Bainton, No. 2 back and starter at left half, is the best passer on the squad, is very adept at skirting the ends, is fast and does most of the kicking on the squad. He weighs about 196 and has a sensation in the independent league last year. Hansberry is his substitute and is a big fellow, about 220. He'll be used through the line.

John Norton at the other half-back position is a good-looking kid, built like Larry Olsen, the Duckling, and is a good runner. Barrett, his understudy is a big, rough, tough guy from Queena Anne, the alma mater of Ray Segale, who blocks and runs well. Art Strom is the blocking back and weighs around 200.

All-American Brother
At left tackle position, Elmo Bond is the mainstay. He's the third brother of the Washington Bonds. The eldest, Chuck, was all-American in 1936, about the time Del Bjork was going great guns for Oregon. Elmo weighs 215 and is said to be the best of the three.

Tackle Rog Johnson, Fishing Enthusiast!

Standing six feet tall and tipping the scales at 220 pounds is hefty right tackle Roger Johnson.

Asked as to his favorite sport Rog answered nochalantly, "Why fishing, of course." It was found that Rog used to take time out from his high school studies in San Bernardino, California, to trot 70 miles up to Lake Arrowhead, where his father has a cabin, and make that his headquarters during his fishing escapades around the Arrowhead country. Trout streams in the nearby rampaging fishing and swimming in the lake occupied the majority of his time there. Rog had a look of pride on his face when he told about the wonderful territory around the lake.

60-Minute Man
Johnson's showing in the Washington game three weeks ago was one of his outstanding performances of the season. Roger played the full 60 minutes of the game, and is the only Oregon player to see action during an entire contest so far this year. He was continually smashing up the power plays of Coach Jimmy Phelan's proteges.

Rog had to think awhile when asked who his toughest line opponent has been this season, but he finally decided on USC's DeLauer, one of the strongest defensive and offensive tackles on the coast. Rog played only 26 minutes of the USC battle because of a sprained knee suffered on the last play of the Washington game. However he was in there long enough to find out how terribly

Yearling Gridders Ready for Babes

By LEE FLATBERG

The odds will be even and your choice is as good as anyone else's when the Washington Babes and the Oregon Ducklings meet to do battle on the Seattle gridiron today at 2 o'clock.

The frosh will be fully ready for the fray, and itching to hang up their second win of the season.

Coach "Pest" Welsh, Babes mentor, has not announced a starting lineup, but with the heft and speed that the Babes boast, the frosh can look forward to a busy afternoon.

Word from Seattle states that two of Welsh's star backs Wally Wan, and Bob Berry will not be able to play.

Regular Return

With the strength that the return of Merritt Kufferman and Cliff Griffin will bring to the line, and with Inky Boe showing his old form after an operation on his foot, the frosh will show the Seattle fans a good exhibition of football.

Coach John Warren's probable starting line up will find Bert Gianelli and Gene Peterson at the end posts, Cliff Giffin and Pat Wynne at the tackle posts, Paul Formoso and Chuck Elliott willing the guard positions, and Brad Formoso and Chuck Elliott filling center. Pete James is slated to get the nod at the quarterback berth. Gale Emmons is probable starter at full, and Bob Liday at left half. Warren will have a hard time to decide on which of his touch-down trio, Larry Olsen, Jimmy Newquist and Inky Boe will draw the starting assignment at the right half slot.

MONTANAN
Bustin' Bob Sparks plays full-back for the Grizzlies and is hailed as one of the hardest hitters on the squad.

Webfoots Swim; 'Snowball Rally' Melts With Mist

The rains came, and Oregon's proposed "Snowball Rally" hit the living organizations and melted away last night.

Many a coed put her textured finger-tips into the telephone dial, and called Pat Keller, chairman of the rally, protesting against it because of the miniature lakes on the street corners, and everyone was generally against the Venetian atmosphere. One football player who had eaten lots of steak complained that he was afraid he'd fall into a mud-puddle and get cramps.

With water on the brain, Keller finally decided to call off the whole affair.

Evanston, Illinois high school students, assembling in their auditorium, to hear the Coe college band, waited half an hour, discovered there had been a 30-day error in dates.
