

Duck Tracks

By KEN CHRISTIANSON, Co-Editor of Sports

We strolled down to Hayward field to catch a glimpse of the Webfoots Wednesday afternoon during practice. We reached the grandstands and sat down. Three minutes later we were unexpectedly invited to come back Saturday for the game. But before we left we noticed some changes in the Oregon lineup.

Tackles were Jim Stuart and Ed Moshofsky. Later we found that Rog Johnson had been tackled by a mighty flu germ and thrown for a loss. Guards were Val Culwell and Ray Segale. Bill Regner was at one end, Erling Jacobsen at center, Chet Haliski at quarter, Len Isberg at right half, and Marsh Stenstrom at fullback.

I think Tommy Roblin was playing left halfback as Chuck Boice and I were hurried out but I wouldn't swear to it. It seemed that Oregon was working on defense to stop the Bruin's sensation, Jackie Robinson.

All else is a matter of conjecture. Coach Tex Oliver must be greatly keyed up for this game, for secret practice orders were issued for the remainder of the week. Apparently, Oliver plans to use some new hocus-pocus on the unsuspecting Bruins.

Good Game Indicated

At any rate, secret practice or not, hocus-pocus or not, naive Bruins or not, it all points to a great game Saturday. On the one hand is the UCLA team which has not been beaten by more than seven points in any one game, but which has not won any either. On the other hand is the Oregon team which has recently found its offensive punch—so long dead. Montana still hasn't recovered from that 38 to 0 scrubbing.

UCLA boasts one of the strongest lines on the coast, especially through the center, where Oregon is weak. The Bruins have had consistently good teams since the advent of Babe Horrell. They have some of the speediest backs on the coast in the shape of Robinson, Ray Bartlett, and Ted Forbes.

The Bruins, 37 strong with coaches, managers, and equipment, will pull into town sometime tomorrow in time to try the turf at Hayward field and have a brief workout. They stopped yesterday at Davis, California and worked out on the California Aggie campus.

Flavelle and I

Should Oregon wax the Bruin's slats Saturday, and I think they can, I'm going to take a little of the credit for it. For, there in the Oregon dressing room, beneath Bob Flavelle's critical article which appeared in Old Oregon recently, was the first half of my last column.

Cute little red marks pointed out a certain boldface section in which was charged that "the center of the Oregon line was woefully weak on pass plays. Many times as Len Isberg dropped back to pick a receiver, Grizzlies sifted through some place in the Oregon line like flour through a crack, and inevitably Isberg would have to run with the ball."

If this statement is calculated to help Oregon retain that new-found offensive spirit and give the Oregon linemen a little more drive, then we have accomplished our purpose in pointing out the most noticeable weak points which showed up against a weak team. If this effect is derived then we shan't have reason to write of this again.

Frosh-Rook Feature

But the closest game in Eugene during Homecoming should be the farewell appearance of the Oregon freshman club against Oregon State's rooks this evening. Civic stadium at the south end of Willamette street is the scene and stars of both teams will be performing starting at 8 p.m.

Chuck Shelton is the rook team with about ten other players. He's the fastest thing to come out of the high country

Frosh Battle Rooks In Grid Final Tonight

City Stadium Turf Scene of Tilt Between Rivals

Oregon Ducklings will be out to ring up their second win of the season over the rooks tonight, when they tangle on the civic stadium gridiron. The kickoff is scheduled for 8 o'clock. The game will close the 42nd year of rivalry between the two school's freshman squads.

Coach John Warren sends his gridders into the tilt with a slight lead in games won up to date. Since "Honest John" took over the reins of freshman athletics in 1935 he has won six of the eleven games played with McKallip's men. One contest was a scoreless tie.

Two Backfields
McKallip has worked with two different backfield combinations this week, and it is likely that he will substitute the backfield as a unit as did Coach "Pest" Welsh in the Frosh-Babe game in Seattle Saturday.

The first string unit of the Duck's backfield will include Dick McReynolds at quarter, Everett Smith and Bill McInnis at the halves, and Lewis "Chock" Shelton at full.

The second backfield combination finds Bill Rush at quarter, Dee Krantz and Bob Leichhardt at the halves, and Art Franklin will hold down the fullback slot.

Bob Lovelady, lanky wingman, will probably watch the game from the sidelines, with the broken hand received in the Seattle game. Bert Gianelli, burly end, has been nursing a bruised shoulder.

Warren has his touchdown trio of Larry Olsen, Jimmy Newquist, and Inky Boe ready to hurl at the rooks.

around Pendleton in years since Jay Graybeal. He doesn't need to play ball—he has a private plane and car. But he lives through love of the sport and runs the 100 in :10. He weighs 215 pounds.

On the Frosh side we have several stars topped at times by Jim Newquist, interscholastic all-American, who tore off an average of five yards per try in 14 attempts in Portland against the rooks. His No. 1 relief man, Inky Boe, was charged with letting Shelton score in the last encounter, but he realized his mistake before the end of the game and paced the Oregon attack. The attack netted some 60 yards and a touchdown.

Uclans Arrive Today For Olivermen Test

By JOHNNY KAHANANUI

They're coming at noon today, Coach "Babe" Horrell and 37 Bruins, a bunch of gridders with just enough oneness to relish dumping nuts, bolts, wrenches, and a few touchdowns on Oregon Homecoming festivities to clog the whole "deal." And it is rumored the Uclans, out for their first conference win, aren't particularly choosy about whose head they step on for a boost up a notch.

Robinson Threat

So Marse Tex Oliver, yo' had better get yo' trappers real ready. Dem' Bruins ain't Grizzlies, 'specially dat little brown one, Jackie Robinson, he sho' can go like de debil!

And how to bag the little Bear's offense is probably what the Webfoot headman has been hemming and hawing about all week. And it's "probably" because he has slapped the "Absolutely No Trespassing" sign on the gates of the practice field all the time he has been prodding the Webfoots through grueling rehearsals, the sign being applicable even to the press.

Field Will Be Damp

Hayward stadium will probably be a bit damp for the fray, and to avoid unnecessary complications, the Frosh-Rook game which was to have been played on that turf was routed to the Eugene Civic stadium.

Drivellings oozing out of cracks in the "wall" of the Duck practice fortress have it that Oliver is planning some kind of spectacular "defense" for UCLA's all-over-the-creation ground attack, an offense rendered doubly dangerous with speed-ball Robinson in there rolling. Also the Duck mentor is not neglecting his offense. He may shake a few tricks out of his coat sleeve Saturday.

Uneven Scores Distinguish Six Volleyball Tilts

Phi Sigs, Omegas, SAEs, Sigma Nus, Sammies, SX Win

Lop-sided scores again marked Thursday's intramural volleyball activity in six "A" league encounters.

The most one-sided tilt of the day came when Phi Sigma Kappa walloped Canard club, 15-1, 15-0, in a game which the Canard boys never had a chance. Another landslide victory was marked up by Sigma Chi over the Terriers, 15-1, 15-2. Sigma Nu also counted up an easy win over Sigma hall by tallies of 15-3, 15-4.

Kappa Sig had to go through three contests before they bested the yeomen, 13-15, 15-12, and 16-14. Omega hall out-distanced Sigma Alpha Mu in a three-game set, 14-16, 16-14, 16-14. The other contest of the day saw Sigma Alpha Epsilon belt Alpha hall, 15-7, 15-7 in straight games.

Volleyball teams draw a furlough Friday but will again resume their schedule Tuesday with six "B" clubs playing.

Close Games Mark Coed Volleyball play

Alpha Delta Pi, Susan Campbell, Kappa and AOPi advanced toward league volleyball victories Thursday by downing the Chi Omegas, Alpha Gams, Thetas and Pi Phis. The hardest fought battle saw a strong ADPi team turn back the Chi Os 33-25.

Susan Campbell shellacked the Alpha Gam delegation by a top-sided score of 60-6, while the defending champion Kappas remained in the running by overcoming the Thetas 29-15.

AOPi eked out a win over Pi Phi by a one-point margin. The score at half time gave the AOPis a comfortable lead, but the determined Pi Phi lasses made a comeback but were unable to overcome the lead. The final score was 28-28.
