

UO Graduate, Author Traveler Plans to Live On Washington Farm

By MARY ANN CAMPBELL

From the University of Oregon's amiable undergraduate atmosphere to Hitler's Germany, India, the Orient, and New York, may seem a considerable distance, but Nancy Wilson Ross, guest speaker at Theta Sigma Phi's matrix table tonight, and author of "Take the Lightning," has managed to cover all this territory and more, too.

When she graduated from the University's school of journalism in 1924, Mrs. Ross went east and spent several years in New York, writing articles on various phases of the arts for national magazines. In 1932, she published her first novel, "Friday to Monday," and that same year she and her husband, who is an architect, went to Europe and lived for a time in Dessau, Germany. It was here that she wrote an article for the Saturday Evening Post, "A German Mainstreet," in which she foretold Hitler's rise to power. It was for this article she was put on the German list of "dangerous foreigners."

Washington Farm

She and her husband have recently bought a farm in Washington near Hood's canal, which they found after wandering all over the United States in a trailer searching for the best place to build a home. They spent some time in the southwest, as Mrs. Ross is interested in Indians and year.

their customs. The land in Washington, which they finally chose because Mrs. Ross is a native of Olympia, Washington, is about 60 acres and is on three levels. The top one, where the barn that Mr. Ross uses as a studio stands, is farm land; the second level, where the house will be, is an old orchard, and the third is a long sandy beach.

Mrs. Ross was a member of Theta Sigma Phi and belonged to Pot and Quill while she was in school here.

Law Book Talks Set

A series of lectures on the use of law books will be given during this week by Carlton B. Putnam, representative of the West Publishing company. Mr. Putnam, annual lecturer at the law school, visits all the law schools west of the Mississippi river at least once a year.

Matrix Banquet To Be at Osburn

In a setting of candles and fall flowers at the Osburn hotel tonight Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism fraternity, will hold its annual Matrix Table banquet to honor outstanding women in the fields of journalism, literature, and the arts. Doris Murphy, president of the University chapter, will be toastmistress.

Honored guests will be Mrs. Nina Riasonovsky of Eugene, who won the 1940 Atlantic Monthly prize for her novel, "The Family," and Nancy Wilson Ross, Oregon alumna, who will be the featured speaker. Her topic is "Symbols of Our Time."

Among the important guests will be Mrs. Charles A. Sprague and Mrs. Earl Snell of Salem, and Mrs. Burt Brown Barker of Portland.

Four girls will be especially honored for their work in journalism. They are Betty Jane Biggs and Mildred Wilson, University sophomores, Betty Jones, University high senior, and Ruby Schmolcke, Eugene high senior.

Fashion Cruise Theme For Gamma Alpha Chi

By LOIS HULSER
Society Editor

It's the first girl ask boy affair of the term so naturally Gamma Alpha Chi Saturday evening will feature formal dress with all the trimmings. Coeds will pay the passage on the fashion cruise to be given by the women's advertising honorary in Gerlinger and it will be their task to show the dates a good time.

Passengers will go up the gangplank at 9 o'clock where aboard ship will dance to the music of Eddie Gipson's orchestra. The stage will be featured as the fashion deck with mannequins modeling the latest creations for coeds as shown by downtown Eugene merchants.

To Honor Pledges

The dance to honor new pledges of the honorary is the only formal of the term, with the exception of the pledge dance which terminated rush week. It holds the social spotlight alone this week since no other evening activities scheduled for the weekend.

Clothes in order for the dance are formal for the girls, tux or dark suits for the men.

Desserts

Tuesday night Alpha Gamma Delta and Sigma Phi Epsilon had a dessert. Last night's list includes Alpha Delta Pi-Delta Tau Delta; Alpha Chi Omega-Sigma Alpha Mu; Alpha Omicron Pi-Sigma Nu; Alpha Phi-Kappa Sigma; Alpha Xi Delta-Delta Upsilon; Chi Omega-Theta Chi; Pi Kappa Alpha-Delta Delta Delta; Sigma Alpha Epsilon-Delta Gamma; Hendricks hall-Yeomen; Kappa Alpha Theta-Sigma Chi; Phi Kappa Psi-Kappa Kappa Gamma; Pi Beta Phi-Pi Sigma Kappa; Sigma Kappa-Campbell club; Phi Gamma Delta-Susan Campbell hall; and Zeta Tau Alpha-Chi Psi.

More Exchanges

Tuesday night Campbell co-op and University house had an exchange dinner. Sigma Phi Epsilon gave a preference Wednesday evening.

Friday evening the boys' dorms

Anchors Aweigh Suggested by Sailorish Togs

It's "Anchors Aweigh" for Marylee Fry in her navy blue sailor coat with the red braiding and anchors on the sleeves. Copying her grandmother's tinge type is Bette Christensen in her plaid taffeta blouse with the mutton sleeves, to which she adds a saucy scotch hat of the same plaid. Dorothy Routt cuts a cute figure in her mathematical skirt with the diagonal stripes in teal and darker blue. Margaret Johnson is sporty in a beige jacket, long and fitted at the waist with big double pockets. Checking with the boys is Betty Anne Lemon in her date dress of black and white checked velveteen. Snapping up the floor show are Betty Jane Poindexter's brown suede shoes, tapped and heeled in lighter alligator. Winnie Green's red corduroy hat wakes up the grey November day like a hunter's horn. Stephanie Peterson has something to be sheepish about in her black angora hat with the brilliant red band. Some glass—have the suspenders that the boys are wearing!

are sponsoring a radio dance in John Straub memorial hall.

Saturday sophomores of Gamma Phi Beta are giving their sisters a breakfast dance at the chapter house. Ray Dickson and his band will furnish the music.

Dramatics Group Will Meet Today

The dramatics club will hold its regular meeting at 5 o'clock today in Westminster house. There is to be rehearsal of the comedy entitled "Utter Relaxation." Roles for the play, "One Christmas Eve" will be cast. The marionettes are being worked on to be used later on for a show. Any students wishing to help make these are invited to come to the meeting.

Oregon's Women Blaze Her Trail

By PHYLLIS FOSTER

With attention being paid this week to outstanding women students on the campus, and a number of invitations issued for tonight's Matrix Table, some interesting information has come to light concerning coeds who have graduated and found their places in the world.

The University's women graduates—theoretically and literally—deserve a few orchids. While glancing through records of the placement of Oregon graduates, one finds that women are finding careers in every branch of civic life.

For the past two years Henriette Horak, '36, who received the journalism award, has had the position of managing all magazine advertising for the International Golden Gate exposition. Margaret Petch graduate from the school of journalism, is working for a national advertising company, and during the summer had charge of the Standard Oil company's signboards on which she used Walt Disney's animations and jingles.

In Sacramento, San Jose, and San Francisco one may see "Display by Kaye"; these are designs of all types especially jewelry stores' windows, and the designer is Kathryn Bossinger.

Also following artistic lines are Harriet Thomson who is in the interior decorating department of Meier & Frank's in Portland and Jean Sutherland, graduate assistant in sculpturing in the art school.

Elizabeth Turner is head of personnel for Sears & Roebuck in Portland.

Oregon women are in Politics, too! Nora Hickman, law school graduate, is working with the democratic party.

Marianbeth Wolfenden is acting as assistant Campfire Girls executive in Portland, and Grace Martin finds that social work in the relief offices in Portland keeps her busy. In 1939 Katherine Kressmann Taylor's "Address Unknown" was published and has been widely read throughout the United States.
