Oregon's aroused football team, bubbling over with fighting spirit, battered, tackled, drove, and ran Oregon State College into submission Saturday on Bell field at Corvallis.

Approximately 18,000 fans watched the spectacle as Oregon won, 20 to 0, breaking Oregon State's four-year superiority over the Ducks. The win raised the Webfoots from seventh to sixth place in conference standings while Oregon State remained in third.

The 44-year rivalry between the two schools may be summarized in a few short words of statistics. Oregon has now won 24. Oregon State has won 13 and seven have ended in a tie.

Not Since 1935!

Not since 1935 had Oregon beaten the Beavers and not once this year have the Webfoots shown the power, drive, and general football effectiveness which was so noticeable Saturday.

They will be on hand again tomorrow as the Oregon student body, 3700 strong, takes "part time" off to celebrate the first "Civil War" victory since 1935.

The game yesterday was certainly swell,
So don't think that I'm casting aspersions

When I say that the thing that that impressed me most

Was the fact that we made two conversions.

The throttle is open and the brakes are disconnected so let 'er roll, Oregon!

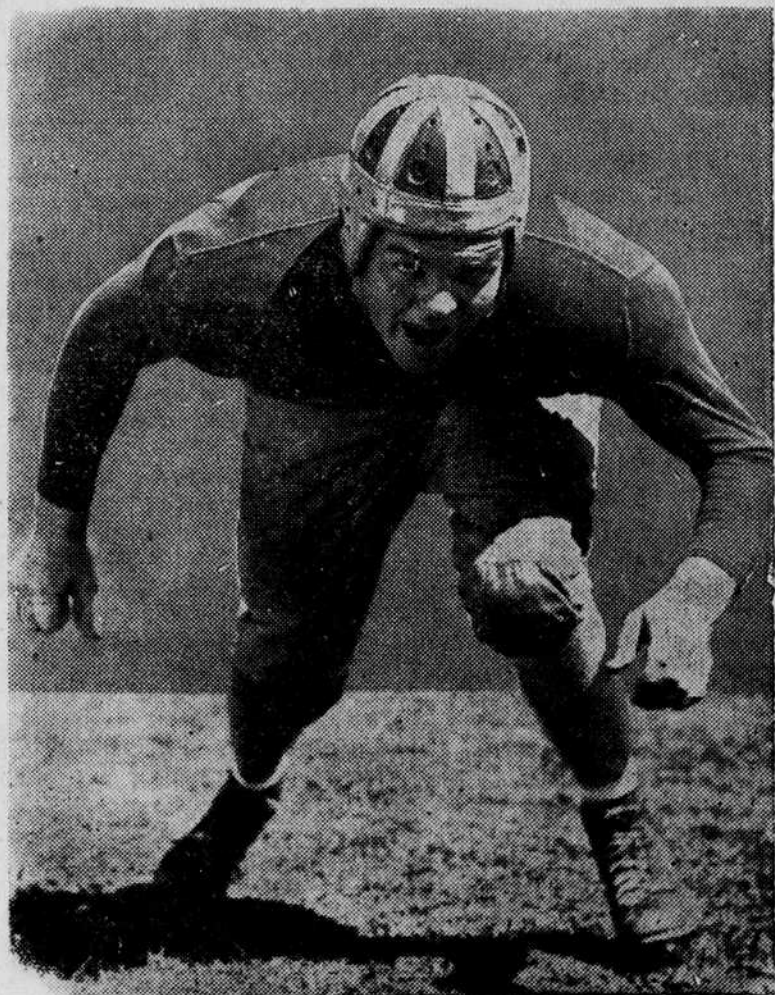

The biggest weekend in five years of "civil war" football will be capped Monday with a lusty pep assembly at 10 o'clock in the Igloo and with a snowball rally parade at 1:30, winding up in a no-date dance in Gerlinger.

Celebration-bent students will pour out of their early morning classes Monday, snatch their house signs, and floor McArthur court to register their delight at the victorious consequences of Oregon's Saturday trek to Aggeland.

Oregon's biggest weekend in five years of "civil war" football will carry on through Monday with a mass assembly in McArthur court at 10 o'clock and a street parade and free dance in Gerlinger starting at 1 o'clock.

Class pants for all men and rooters' lids for freshmen are required by the supervising order of the "O." All members of honor organizations, lettermen, numeralmen—all are to wear their sweaters during the day, both to classes and to the assembly and dance. Warning: Order of the O paddles are hard.

CAPTAIN JIM

The holes just couldn't be found in the Oregon line Saturday by Lon Stiner's Staters due to such play as Jim Stuart, (above) senior tackle exhibited.
