

Yuletide Gifts-Gay Or Quite Horrible?

My MARY ANN CAMPBELL
Comes the gay Yuletide season, the horrible fact that you are going to have to Give People Presents begins to haunt your waking hours and most of your sleeping one, too. That whole matter rapidly swells to the proportions of all your finals, and sometimes even gets more important than exams.

The Dear Family
Your own dear, darling family can present the worst problem of all. Somehow it always seems next to impossible to decide just what they would like, because, after all, you've got to go on living with them, and either have to see your MISTAKE, that looked so beautiful surrounded by holly and mistletoe, perched glumly in the center of the living room, to be pointed out to s'inking and stricken guests with a "Sis gave that to us at Christmas!" or, the even more alternative, have the family unable to sneak out and exchange your gift and consequently mutter mentally all year that you Might Have Done a LITTLE thinking!

Avoid Misery
So, now, to avoid all this misery and horror, we are going to extend the helping hand and take the whole matter under consideration. First, to get your mother a present. If she likes beautiful smells, the Herb Farm Shop puts out some marvelous eau de cologne, soaps, bath salts, and so forth, all scented to resemble the flowers in an English garden. The lilac really DOES smell like a whole hedge of purple and white lilacs in the spring sunshine, and the violet is equally realistic. The Herb Farm Shop also puts out herbs and vinegars containing basil, thyme, sweet majoram, and the old standby tarragon, not all at once, of course!

Jewels!
Or, if she likes jewelry, there are numerous bangles that distinctly resemble carter diamonds, even if they aren't. Stockings are mundane, but handy, and so is lingerie. One present we think anyone, your mother or someone else's, would welcome with cries of joy is one of those hairbrushes put out by the Ogilvie sisters. There are various and assorted ones, but they are all equally effective in attaining shining locks.

Papa, Too
For your father, your gift will largely depend on what he enjoys. If he's a sport-minded soul, all you have to do is prow around some sporting goods store for a bit and you will undoubtedly uncover some fishing tackle he would adore, or some accessory for his guns, or maybe a new variety of ski wax that he hasn't tried. If he prefers his collection of records to the great open spaces, you ought to listen to Lawrence Tibbet and Helen Jepson sing all the songs from "Porgy and Bess" or the album containing the Russian fairytale, "Peter and the Wolf," which is more appreciated by adults than the children. It shouldn't be hard to avoid handing some neckties and socks.

Your Contemporary Sisters
Your older and contemporary sisters are simple. Just get them what you'd like to have, and they'll be perfectly happy. Your brothers, especially the younger ones, are Not So Simple. If they are beyond the quaintly amusing toy age, but not yet sufficiently mature to appreciate the finer things of life, they will probably ask you for skates, either ice or roller, and hockey sticks. You might as well give them to him. He also would probably like a subscription to a magazine that discusses his favorite hobby exclusively.

For your brother who is old enough to drive, a book of script for oil and gas will make him happy.

Merry Christmas!

With a diamond pattern of silver sequins down to the waist, and a full rapturous skirt, this red-crepe formal spells magic and enchantment under anyone's mistletoe.

MISTLETOE MAGIC

Vacations Merry But Probably Hectic

"When exams are over—," and that's where the sentence changes. Ninety per cent of the Oregon students anticipate sleep and home-cooked food. With the best intentions of resting they shall leave the campus only to return two weeks later.

Installation plan buyers will undoubtedly spend the whole vacation earning pin money to pay their bills, and there are always lucky people who have to write so many "thank you notes" that they keep busy until December 31.

Those conscientious students who studied every minute up until their last exam will fall under the category of last minute shoppers and really end up December 24 not being half as efficient as they had planned.

After Christmas the first few days can be spent returning and exchanging gifts and sending New Year's cards to all those forgotten persons who sent you the season's greetings.

One can always start packing early all of the new things Santa brought in order to impress the roommate.

There will be plenty to do—don't worry about boredom. —By Phyllis Foster.

'Y' Asks Freshman Coeds to Yule Party

All freshman girls are invited to a YWCA Christmas party in alumni hall of Gerlinger tomorrow afternoon, according to campus "Y" officers.

Beginning at 4, the party will feature tableaux, and "The Christmas Legend," a story which will be told by Mrs. A. F. Barnett. Christmas carols will be sung.

Guests are asked to bring either a toy or a dime. These will be given to needy children. Elizabeth Edmunds is in charge of arrangements.

Lois Baker Visits UO

Mrs. Lois Baker, regular law school librarian, who is on a law fellowship at Yale university, visited the University of Oregon law school last week. Miss Baker is on a vacation and will return east this week.
