

Frosh Smother Lebanon; Cougars Claw Webfoots

Duck Tracks

By BOB FLAVELLE, Co-Sports Editor

Big Paul Lindeman, Cougar center and a likeable guy if there ever was one, is apparently a firm believer that exercise off the basketball court is unhealthy. At least the stories his teammates tell about him indicate that he never stands when he can sit down, and never sits down when he can lie down...

Lindeman Would Rather Ride

From "Sundy" Sundquist, the light-hearted sharp-shooting guard on Jack Friel's Washington State team, comes the story that when the team arrived at the Eugene station, everyone picked up their bags and started hiking the five blocks to their quarters at the Osburn hotel—that is everyone but Lindeman hiked. No form of persuasion could make the huge boy budge.

Although Friel is in constant fear that Lindeman will be left behind in some soft easy chair, he never has to worry about his center's whereabouts once the hotel is reached. While the other Cougar players are out looking the town over or taking in a show, Lindeman can always be found in his room—in bed—relaxing so he won't get tired.

Washington State players have great respect for the Oregon State Beavers, to whom they lost two heart-breakers at Corvallis, but the consensus of opinion is that last year's Northern division champions from Beaverville were superior to the present Oregon State quintet. They argue that the gaps left by the graduation of Tony Romano and Frank Mandic are too great for Clayton Shaw and Jack Mulder to fill.

Between Webfoots and Beavers

The teams to beat this season are Oregon State and Oregon—it will be a dogfight between those two squads for the 1941 championship. The Washington Staters didn't say that outright but by listening between the lines of their conversation it was easy to see that they didn't consider Idaho or Washington great threats.

The Washington State squad this year is truly a closed organization. Every member is a product of a Washington high school. There isn't a player on the squad that doesn't call the Northwest state his home. Incidentally, Oregon isn't far behind the Cougars in this respect.

Universal Newsreel To Shoot Rifle Teams At Outdoor Practice

Boys' and girls' rifle teams will be photographed in action by Universal news reel photographer, Paris Emery, Sunday afternoon, according to the University news bureau. Emery, a representative of the news reel from Portland, will accompany the teams, directed by Sergeant Harvey Blythe, on a shoot in the woods.

Some time during the near future Emery plans to return to Eugene and photograph cadets in snow maneuvers on an expedition which will be sponsored by Scabbard and Blade.

Students of Nation Requested to Start Drive for Greek Aid

The Emerald has received a letter from the American-Hellenic student committee for medical aid to Greece which asks for contributions to Greece from students.

Her peoples are lacking in food and money and the contributions that the colleges of the nation turn in will be used to purchase medicine for the Greek soldiers, it was stated.

Along with the litter turned in were some suggestions on ways that students could raise money to help Greece. Some of them were: form a mixed committee of professors and students to direct the drive; give an assembly especially devoted to Greece; give a pan-hellenic dance sponsored by Greek letter fraternities and sororities; get Greek students to aid in the drive.

Guides Still on Sale

Only 18 Piggens' Guides are left for sale to new students at the University Co-op, according to a recent check-up. The supply of green and yellow student directories, which sell for 25 cents, will be permanently exhausted as soon as the remaining copies are sold.

Warren's Quintet Wins In Opener

Berrypickers Beaten 43-15 by 1941 Ducklings; Walt Kresse Tops All Scorers With Nine Points; Game Was Ragged

By LEE FLATBERG

The yearling hoopmen ran, fumbled, and fumbled around and about a smaller Lebanon five Friday afternoon to hang up their first victory of the season, 43 to 15. The frosh passed badly, and muffed rebounds, but made up for their numerous errors by a basket barrage that assured them of a win after the first few minutes of play.

The Ducklings opened their scoring fast when Rog Dick dropped a shot in the first few seconds of play, followed by two quick ones by Bill Gissberg.

Lloyd Jackson added one more before Simpson, Lebanon forward, countered with a foul pitch. The Ducklings added three quick baskets to gain a 13 to 1 lead, a lead which they never relinquished. The score at half time was 23 to 7.

Kresse Was High Walt Kresse, diminutive frosh guard came out of the fray with scoring honors, caging four shots from the floor and a foul shot to amass nine points. Bob Sheridan rang up three baskets and two foul shots for eight counters to tie with Jackson, who dumped in four baskets from the floor, for runner-up scoring honors.

Bill Gissberg, guard from Everett, Washington turned in a nice floor game and rang up six points. With a tight man-to-man defense and Sheridan and Jackson ruling the backboards the frosh held the Berrypickers from Lebanon to three field goals each half.

Mad Scoring Rush

The second half started in a mad scramble out of which the Oregon "Little Firs" evolved with eight points before Lebanon could counter. Continuing their drive, the yearlings struck with five field goals while holding the hapless Lebanon five to two successful shots to finish the game in a blaze.

YM Slates Branton

The winter term's activities of the life philosophy commission of the YMCA starts Monday evening at 9 o'clock. Dr. James R. Branton is the leader of the discussion with Bob Carlson as student chairman.

COUGARS BEAT 'EM

Hank Anderson, Paul Jackson, and Archie Marshik, Oregon hoop players, were part of the Ducks who assimilated the Washington State Beavers last night. The Cougars won, 48 to 39. Both teams play tonight. Anderson scored 15 points.

Coach Friel Picks Beavers, Ducks

By TOMMY MAYES

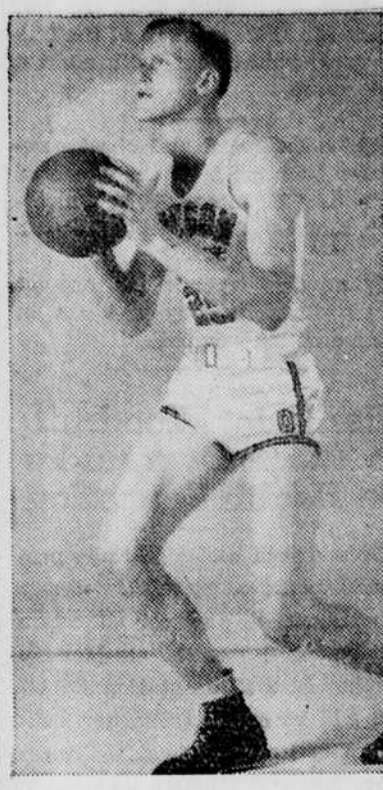

"... and now, I want you to go out there and—Say, who's doing that infernal tapping on the door?" The door opened. His smile was as good as any well-planned sunrise. Jack Friel, smiling good natured coach of the Washington State Cougars held out his hand, exchanged a few words and turned to a dozen or so nail-biting Cougar hoopmen lolled about the room.

Personality Pleading The intrinsic Mr. Friel, as he is outwardly known to everyone up, down, and along the coast, has that certain sort of personality seldom popularized by a basketball coach—warm, outgoing, and yet dynamic. "Please, sit down," he said. Friel saw plenty of basketball in his hey-day, playing on the small Walthville high school quintet in the pre-war years. He literally lived and breathed basketball during those handle-bar-and-hoop-skirt days, but in the year of 1917 he was lured into overseas duty with the U. S. field artillery and had to put the game aside and replace it with hob-nailed boots and hand grenades.

Following the war, he enrolled in Business Administration at WSC and returned to his old by-line on the Cougar varsity his last years, with his name under the captain's caption during his junior year. Friel isn't giving his team the big pre-season back-slap most sports-writers have been raving about. "Oregon and Oregon State will probably decide on the conference crown this year," he says, speaking as though he really means it. "And then, perhaps Washington..." he continued, taking a side-step to let it be known that he definitely isn't counting on his own team to take

BEAVER

Ted Henningsen, forward for Oregon State, may see action against Oregon January 17 at Corvallis. It will be Oregon's third conference game.

Huskies Tip Idaho, 45-43

The University of Idaho Vandals went down to defeat at the hands of the University of Washington Huskies last night in the U of W pavilion by a score of 45 to 43. Otis Hilton, six foot seven inch center of the Vandals, scored 16 points to lead the two teams in scoring. Idaho dominated the play in the first half with fine backboard play. Half time score was Washington 26, Idaho 23.

Andrew Vincent and David J. McCosh, members of the University art school faculty, rushed by train to San Francisco Thursday morning to view a modern French art exhibition.

This is one of the finest groups of modern French paintings ever shown in the United States, according to Dean E. F. Lawrence. The exhibit will last only till Saturday so the two faculty members had to leave before the end of the week in order to see the work.

WSC Hoopers Pull Away From Duck Five, 48-39

Jack Friel's Men Gain Best Average; Rebounds Even

Washington State had the best individual average—five field goals in 12 attempts, followed by Anderson with six in 15 and Bill Borchert with three in seven. Borchert was one of the most effective men on the floor for his time in the game. He scored nine points and grabbed eight of the Oregon rebounds.

Oregon's Lead

Lindemann drew first blood for the Cougars with a free throw attempt. Then Oregon stepped into the lead and held it until 14 minutes had gone by in the first half. Anderson and Townsend did the trick with field goals and free throws. So well were the Cougars held down that they failed to score a field goal until nine and a half minutes had passed.

After 14 minutes, Lindemann began to pull Duck tailfeathers. He scored on a pass from Owen Hunt. Townsend made a free shot and the score was 9 to 6 for Oregon. Then Lindemann boosted the Cougar score with a rush. Three times he tallied for six points without interruption. Borchert entered the game and broke up Lindemann's fun. Warren Taylor and Anderson came through for Oregon. Then Kirk Gebert tied it up at the half, 14 to 14.

Butts started the Cougar snarl in the second period. The Cougars challenged and Oregon was unable to do anything about it. Oregon tied the score at 16 to 16 and then fell into the backwash of the Cougar attack. Butts, Lindemann, and Gebert carried the brunt of the scoring spree during the second period. Oregon would climb to within four or six points of the Washington Staters and then fall behind again when Butts and company started to roll again.

WSC Margin Lengthens

Time and again as the Webfoots were creeping up on the Cougars.

Matmen Maul Way Into Second Round

Intramural wrestling went into second stages today as wrestlers from all the men's living organizations grunted and groaned for fame. The 155-pound division held the limelight yesterday while the 165-pounders ran a close second.

Gebert or the irrepressible Hunt, Friel's sophomore find, would send a couple of baskets swishing through the hoop. As the time raced on and the fans were becoming more exhausted swishing their heads as if watching a tennis match, the Washington State margin rose with the stock of Oregon State and Washington in the Northern division. Coach Horvick, Borchert, Taylor, Anderson, and Marshik into the game at various intervals to gain command of the backboards, but even without Lindemann in the lineup, the Friel-men managed to hold their own.

Only four Oregon men entered the scoring column—Anderson, Townsend, Borchert, and Taylor. Oregon seemed tired during the latter stages of the game, while the Cougars gained confidence and strength.
