

Miss The Measles? Don't Miss Informal

By LOIS HULSER

Yours truly was really enthusiastic about this Sophomore Informal last term and wrote a story with one o'clock permission screaming across the lead. With a sense of satisfaction she handed it in and went home to be greeted by her roommate who said, "Isn't it terrible that the Informal has been postponed?" Do you doubt I am disgusted?

I was just told to write a Sophomore Informal story so here it is—Quote—event, Sophomore Informal; place, Gerlinger; band, Ray Dickson; theme, Joe College; time, 9 p.m. Saturday, Phi Delt underclassmen having a banquet before the deal. If you've missed the measles don't miss the informal.

Are ATO Frosh Reliable?

The lads from the ATO hotel are simplifying the routine of dinner and a house dance by having a dinner dance at the Eugene. Leon Mojica is playing freshmen on phone duty, they tell us. Reliable sources say Eddie Gipson is their man.

The only time you see snow in this country is at a formal dance, Susan Campbell gals are banking John Straub hall with winter enchantments. Hal Harden's band will play.

Hongkong and San Francisco atmosphere will haunt Highland house Friday eve when the gals entertain their dates at a Chinese house dance.

Ah! Food

The week rolls around again and here we go with the dessert list—Alpha Chi Omega-Sigma Chi; Alpha

I wanted to say some rather devastating things about men but that is a field already overcrowded don't you think I would like to point out that love is your being regarded like a nice old shoe or maybe a tennis racket or a dog with beautiful eyes I would like to add, furthermore, that it's annoying being handy patient and sweet but I won't because women—

God bless 'em—aren't capable of thought women—

God made 'em—ho hum maybe he really shouldn't have ought.

And this women's page was to be About Bridge . . .

pha Delta Pi-Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Alpha Gamma Delta-Delta Tau Delta; Alpha Phi-Pi Kappa Alpha; Zeta hall-Alpha Xi Delta Phi Kappa Sigma-Chi Omega; Delta Delta Delta-Beta Theta Pi; Kappa Sigma-Gamma Phi Beta; Kappa Alpha Theta-Phi Delta Theta; Delta Upsilon-Kappa Kappa Gamma; Law School-Pi Beta Phi; and Susan Campbell-Canard club.

Alpha Gamma Delta had a Tuesday dinner dance with Omega hall. Omega hall lads had a preference dinner last night. Sunday dinner guests at Kappa Sigma will each have two dreaming eyes of blue and a smile beyond compare.

Note to the proofreader: Plis be careful with the dessert list 'cause the SAEs and the Sig Eps are extremely unhappy about last week's column, yes, most unhappy. Until next week, goodbye. Extra note—I didn't say "so be it."

What Attraction Have Cards And Coffee Houses?

Just as a sort of Gallup poll, it might be amusing to find out just how many of the people who perch about in the various local coffee houses playing bridge—you know, game, involves cards—honestly haven't anything better to do.

The fascination of the endless combinations possible in 52 individual pieces of pasteboard is admittedly inevitable in specimens of the human race, but somehow or other, when four said persons get through, what have they to show for an afternoon's hard mental work? Yes, a beautiful glow of satisfaction that somebody did (or maybe didn't) trump the ace and consequently someone was awfully annoyed, and someone else was All Pleased and Happy.

Endless, Too

Bridge is a bit on the endless side, too, and certainly lacks the crisp verve of a game of poker or a round of Twenty-One. Twenty-One always has the virtue of making the players feel like Western GAMBLERS, and pleasantly wicked, for no good reason, and stud poker produces the same emotion. Also, neither game limits the crowd to four. Four people may have fun, but six or eight can have even more.

Then, bridge discourages the fine art of conversation, not that that is a new idea, but still, it DOES! Maybe no one present has anything really worth hearing to say, but there's no harm in saying it.

Oh, well, everybody for miles will continue to mull over bridge hands for hours anyway, and manage to push aside all their good intentions to go study grimly. Still, studying now and again never really hurts the GPA!

Leighton and Betty Declare Bridge War

By JOEY CHRYSTALL

"I think maybe I should learn how to play bridge," I mused into my coke, innocently unaware that my statement would be accepted as anything other than an impersonal comment on amusements of the day. Too late I realized that it had not been accepted in this manner when I saw the piercing gleam in the eyes of Leighton and Betty.

across from me. Cursing my stupidity, I remembered that Betty and Leighton were habitual bridge players who were usually, after the manner of bridge players, howling about for a fourth. I was to be an innocent victim to their insane greed for pleasure!

What System?

Leighton pounced first. "Of course, you'll want to decide on your system first." Betty followed quickly with "Yes, your system makes all the difference."

"Oh yes, system," I said. I could see that this would not be accepted as an adequate answer by Betty's look of extreme patience. In the tone of one leading a little child she explained, "One can play bridge by either the Sam Gordon or the Culbertson system. Which do you want to learn?"

Thinking that I would put it all in a nutshell, "which is the best?" I queried brightly. From the babble of sound which ensued, the bitter looks distributed impartially about the place, and the precise way in which Betty snapped the pencil point with which she had been tracing the grain of the table I gathered that

Spring Posies Begin Blossoming on Hats

Small gardens of spring are blooming all over the campus; clothes are getting lighter; beige, apple green, pink, blue, and all the old sunshine-teasers are coming out.

Hit of the week: Mary Moon's purple hat with the victory wings and flowers. She was a Vogue staff visitor on the campus; Joan lends Supple grace in her powder-blue jacket—all it needs is a big daffodil in the lapel; Grace Babbitt strikes a hit in her gay Joseph's coat; a copy of Snow White is Marge Curtis in her white woolly sweater; a good mixer is Connie Averill's varied tweed jacket; Pat Erickson goes woody in her elf-green mannish jacket with the big pockets.

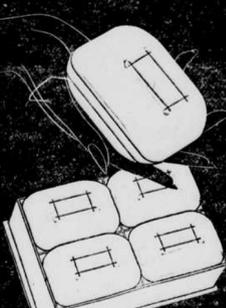

Bob Whitely goes hunting without a bugle (except the Emerald) in his red plaid shirt. Bill Hilton, with a cigarette over each ear, is Esquire in a beige flannel shirt.

Date Bait

The sophomore informal finally gets into date bait for Saturday evening. Friday night there are three house dances but for regular campus dating we still list the Park, Playground, and movies. Have you tried the art museum on Sunday afternoon yet?

Betty Lost 'Em

If anybody notices a small string of pearls kicking about, Betty Keller would be interested in hearing about them.

They are the small add-a-pearl type on a gold chain. Miss Keller values them as a sentimental gift from her father.

Betty has advertised for them, put the police on their trail, and worried frantically. She can be reached at the Alpha Phi house or through the journalism office. Isn't there a pearl diver in the crowd?

The weekly YW tea will be given this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the bungalow by the members of the music group.

Fashion Redoubled

Back in the fashion limelight this season are redingotes and that extra special appeal they have for spring. Hadley's have a selection of the new print dresses, which are going over on their own merits, and a light wool redingote completely lined with the same print as the dress. One of the very smartest outfits for spring and summer wear . . . 19.95.

Spirit!

Simplicity in style has always counted high in the fashion world, and for school nothing is nicer than a tiny white collar for light wool dresses. February is a drab month and you'll want something new, so why not change your fall dress by seeing the Broadway's selection in neckwear. They are smart, new and different.

Jauntily Yours

Prints are all the new news at J. C. Penney's this time, and if you like riotous color, this season will be your heyday. Everything is going to be color and prints, particularly black and red. The styles vary slightly, but dominating trends show pleats and full skirts to lead the market as do three-quarter length sleeves. At least that is all the news straight from New York and Penney's. See some today.

Cold Cheeks

Winter is still blowing and it is important that your complexion is guarded against the cold. Dorothy Grey offers a double-dollar value in the Blustery weather lotion, that comes in an extra large bottle—you'll be amazed to see how big it is—and softens your skin immediately. Tiffany-Davis stocks it for $1.00.

Sweet Reducing

Off with the pounds in the easiest way in the world . . . the new idea is to eat one piece of Ayds—like a caramel chew—half an hour before meals. The candy contains lots of vitamins and minerals so that when you eat you will not crave so much food and thereby will lose weight. The box has 104 pieces of candy, enough for a month's supply for $2.00 at Millers. . .

Half of the Battle

One of the top items on your spring shopping list should be a coat, and now is the time to shop for one because the stocks are large and complete with every style. Beards are featuring especially for the Oregon coed, a blue covert cloth, double breasted coat for $22.50. It has the new military back and wide lapels. Truly the "smart" coat of the year.

We Salute

The girl's in the navy! At least that is the impression you get from the new navy dress at Kaufman Bros. It is silk crepe, laced up the front, has a tie back, three-quarter length sleeves, and a huge sailor collar with four rows of gold braid to relieve its simplicity. This is "the dress" of the week.
