

Face Bore You? Try Renovations

By JOEY CHRYSTALL

So you're bored. Same view in the mirror every time you look, same way of fixing your hair, of putting on your face—you could do it in your sleep. It is three years since anyone said to you "My how you've changed" and then it was an old family friend who hadn't seen you for 12 years (it would be hard NOT to change, and that sort of thing). To add to your list of "What I Would Like to Try if I ONLY HAD THE TIME . . .":

Face Boring?

If your whole FACE bores you, you might investigate the makeup which comes in a cake and is put on with a wet sponge. It is copied directly from the panchromatic makeup used in the theater, which is usually quite orange, and modified to suit the ordinary light you would be in. You can use powder with this or not, as you please—it really looks nice either way.

A friend of ours who ALWAYS wears powder likes to get a bit of cologne on her hands, and pat it on her face. She says this sets the powder on, and at the same time removes the powdered look.

Faintly Movie-ish

Even if you can't stand the idea of doing anything faintly like what a movie star does, it's rather gay to experiment with a lipstick brush. You can acquire a new and interesting mouth, also you can use your favorite lipstick much longer.

Another item from the theater is a trick with an eyebrow pencil. Try getting an awfully good point on it, then drawing a faint outline just above your eyelashes and out at the corners a little. Of course, this is better if applied very sparingly.

ALL FROM WOOD

Deana Marlow, in Los Angeles, models this outfit which is completely made from a new fabric derived from the bark of a South American tree. The raw bark is treated and stretched until it assumes a lacy texture, after which it is bleached and dried.

COED of the WEEK

By BUCK BUCHWACH

Barbara Todd is a straight-shooting, brown-eyed lass of 20 summers who'll stand by California weather even if the state goes some 20,000 leagues under the sea, as it probably will if they keep having those unusual mists with which they've been afflicted.

"California is ok, wet or dry," she bristles, referring, of course, to the weather once more and not to the alcoholic situation. "As for rumors that bi-league baseball clubs are deserting it for Florida because of unusual climatic conditions during their spring training, I don't believe it. All they have in Florida is grapefruit," she exclaimed with her eyes flashing.

Of course they do have bathing beauties, but Barbara didn't say that.

Rifle Team Prexy

Shifting from California to Florida back to the University of Oregon—(no small task in itself)—that stuff about being a straight shooter is no false alarm, because the Emerald's choice for coed of the week happens to be president of the female rifle team and one of its top members.

"So far this season we've managed to beat O.S.C. by 64 points and the Oregon men's team by six, while losing to Washington by five points," informs Barbara. She believes that this year's team is on a par with that of 1940, which won some 15 of 16 matches.

Barbara never shot a rifle before coming to Oregon. Then, after reading of the feats of Marjorie Bates, top shooter on the women's rifle team a few years ago, she decided it would be interesting to try her eye at it. She did, and the Oregon team has been the beneficiary of her decision since.

Too Much Stanford

"I'm not sorry I came to Oregon because I was sick and tired of hearing about Stanford," she insists.

The 5-foot 6-inch charmer thinks basketball is the best sport from the spectator point of view. Of course she didn't mention anything about going steady with Porky Andrews, captain of the Webfoot hoop squad, but that probably had very little to do with her decision. She also refused to name her choice as best player on the Duck quintet, but she does have a hard time seeing the other four guys on the team, her Hendricks hall cohorts slyly whisper.

Like all other coeds of the week interviewed thus far, she hates knee-highs and wooden shoes.

"But the overalls the boys wear make them look just as bad—and just as bowlegged—as any of the girls do in knee-highs," she promptly adds.

Damsel Learns Pin Etiquette Hard Way

By MARY ANN CAMPBELL

Once upon a time there lived a Damsel who had Golden Locks and Blue Orbs and was a Sweet Little Thing. She was dragged to Grade School, Attended high school, and Simply Bounded off to College to finish her education.

Because she was a Freshman and had an adequate and not Too Obvious Line and a Neat Shape, she settled down to Four Years of Fun. But soon she found that life wasn't all Beer and Skittles. (It was not her grades that bothered her—no, dear reader, let us not be misled.)

Date Bait

Spy No. 1 reports that one of the most economical ways of entertaining the girl friend yet to be observed came under her notice last week.

Recipe: one boy, one girl, one fairly rainless night, one portable radio. People concerned walk along a street, preferably Thirteenth, playing radio loudly and imagining they are in Palm Beach, or the Far East, or the Mark Hopkins. Think of the places you could visit that way!

THESPIAN . . .

Religious Drama Set for Sunday

Special Spotlights Built to Accentuate 'Moonset' Scenes

Cast solely from University men from Portland, Eugene, Klamath Falls, and California, "Moonset," famous one-act religious drama, will be performed Sunday evening at 7:15 in the Methodist church auditorium. Mary Staton will direct, and Laurie Pratt, organist, will provide an appropriate musical background.

The entire production is lighted with two powerful shifting spotlights, situated in the church balcony and constructed and operated by James Working. This style of light, reminiscent of that employed by Orson Welles in "Dr. Faustus" and "Julius Caesar," was also used in the church's production of "Everyman" last spring.

The production will be over in time for the "Messiah," it is promised.

Half the men students and one-third of the coeds at the University of Nebraska are either entirely or partially self-supporting.

Horrible Headaches were caused by the Men in her Life. There were two that Counted—the others were merely Useful when she wanted a coke.

One of these MEN wore ancient cords and an unusually unbecoming sweat shirt and was given to chewing gum and smoking at one and the same time, a definite detriment to his conversation. But the Damsel never really listened to him anyway. The Other was on his way to being a Solid Citizen. They inhabited the same fraternity.

One fateful night 'the potential Rotarian hung his pin on the Little Girl. She was terribly happy. Her sisters made her eat pie under the table—a Quaint Native Custom—and she was Coy and Smug by turns to Those Who Inquired about the Hardware on her sweater.

However, the Other Man was Annoyed. He felt she should have waited for HIS pin. But she told him his pin and the one she had were EXACTLY alike and she didn't see that it made much difference. That was when he departed in a HUFF.

All this was Winter Term. By the time Spring came* and the magnolias were blossoming, the Damsel was Fed up with her future Lion's Club President. She longed for the Unreasonable Brute, who was currently squiring a red-head.

She maneuvered and connived and he finally asked her out again. She took good care the Solid Citizen should know about it, and was duly delighted, when, after one or two more dates with her Unwashed, Out-of-Doors Man, she could return his pin.

Then she was ALL SET for her hero to come across with his. But she forgot that fraternity brothers talk to each other.

Moral: There really is no moral, except, possibly, that you can't trust Solid Citizens any more than you can believe the Sturdy Rugged Type when they tell you they love you.

Patter

you probably think you're awfully busy

the alarm clock has a nasty note in its voice at 6:30 a.m.

the sky is dingy grey pretty soon the sun hits the mist it's noon and you're hungry in your 3 o'clock you're sleepy

the sun outside is pure gold before the fog smotherers it then it's p.m. you're hungry again the libe is hot and stuffy

you have a cigarette on the roof wishing to see a star

the house prexy has a set look about her chin

as she shuts the door on you standing on the porch still wishing to see a star

you whip upstairs and stick a few bobby pins in your hair and study econ you probably think you're awfully busy but if you've read this far you really aren't.

All Desserts Crossed Off Date Lists

By LOIS HULSER

There comes a time in every term when underclassmen find themselves studying Friday eve and the entire campus looks a bit unsocial as desserts are crossed off the calendar. Four houses aren't going to let the old shadows of that week—you know the one where you don't go to classes but it's not vacation—spoil their fun.

Tub Brown is coming over from cornvalley with tunes for the Sig Ep dinner dance at the Osburn Saturday eve.

Kappa Sig lads, 'tis said, will "dress for dinner" Saturday and Oregon gals will be southern sweethearts, dancing to the music of Eddie Gipson at the Eugene hotel.

The 1332 Club presents the Top Hatter at the Campbell co-op formal Saturday eve.

Phi Deltas are giving a buffet dinner at their house and going to the Park for an evening of dancing.

Volney H. Jones, University of Michigan anthropologist, is studying refuse at an old Mexican mission to learn what the early Spaniards ate.

Lampshades Are Headgear For Vassarites

Flash Vassar! Coeds here are wearing lampshades for hats. Said one coed, "I wear a lighted bulb at night, so my Harvard man will know the lamp is still burning."

Flash Wellesley! Wellesley girls were called into the dean's office yesterday to explain why they were wearing skating suits to formal dances. Said the rink-leader of the group, "It helps cut the ice."

Flash Sarah Lawrence! Sarah Lawrence cuties today lounged in R.O.T.C. uniforms which had been cut off into culottes. Said one coed, "When it gets springier, we're going to wear Scotch uniforms and call it the 'kilty conscience'."

Flash Oregon! Following the trends of Varras, Wellesley, and Sarah Lawrence, Oregon is going fashion fad—latest modes are fraternity pins worn as hair clasps.

Flash OSC! Straw baskets are being worn upside down for hats. In this way the coeds can also use their hats as textbooks in the advanced strawberry-picking class.

BEARDS'
DISTINCTIVE HATS AND ACCESSORIES

Shopping the Town

By MARY KAY RIORDAN

Military Mood

A true officer's overcoat, at least in style, and just as neat and tailored as an army officer's and it will wear for years to come. It is made of cavalry twill in olive drab. The front is double breasted with pockets and large lapels; however, it is the back that really is smart. A big box pleat runs from the middle down to the hem and there is also a tucked fullness. This is held in by a belt starting at the sides. Only 14.95 at Montgomery Ward and Co.

Go Smartly Feminine

Details are most important in a woman's appearance, and a handkerchief should be considered as a big point. The Broadway has a wonderful selection of imported handkerchiefs in delicate pastel prints. They are large size of a lovely material . . . especially the lace pattern is exquisite. Any one of these would make a grand gift . . . only 25c.

Personality Fish

Wear one of these immensely clever new lapel pins for spring suits and sport clothes. Swans, turtles, dogs and flying fish are all styled with expressive and impressive faces, and nothing is comparable to the Chinese dragon. All of the animals come in yellow, blue, or red for 1.00 at Millers. Many other styles in clips, bracelets, pins, necklaces as well.

Military Mode

That military influence again, only in a milder way! Beards are featuring a good looking brown and beige print dress with cape to complete the outfit. The cape has a full lining of beige crepe and the other material is of a fine wool. It has the military shoulder and the split arm holes on the side. The print dress has short sleeves, front fullness and the new soft shoulders. A matching print turban goes with the ensemble for 29.50 complete.

On A Lark

Little things like bubble bath is what makes a woman's world daintier and more feminine. Tiffany-Davis has some individual packages of Pine or Carnation foaming bath sachet which will fill a tub with lovely big bubbles that are fragrant and lasting . . . 50c. For a special gift, for a friend or yourself, we suggest a bottle of Blossom Cologne in Lilac or Carnation. The box is unusually clever with a transparent flower cut on top.

School to Vacation

At Hadley's Tish-u-Knit originals are designed by Leon. They are made of the finest yarns for highly satisfactory wear and are designed to set off the figure gracefully. The sweaters are featured in Mademoiselle, Vogue, and Harper's Bazaar. They come in all the new pastel shades—yellow, blue, pink, beige, aqua, etc.
