From The Pulpit

"Evenin' folks, how y'all?" Kay Kyser's distinct southern accent is a natural product of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, where as a youngster he displayed the same energy that keeps him on the go 16 out of every 24 hours. His pranks and escapades as a boy are indelibly, and perhaps painfully, inscribed in the annals of Rocky Mount. There was no edifice, no construction, from which Kay and his cohorts didn't suffer some kind of bruising fall in their youthful investigations.

Prankster

Hardly a week went by that Kay's mother didn't receive a call to "come and get her boy" who had either accidentally broken a window, fallen off a roof, or done something equally destructive in an adolescent way.

It worried the family because little Kay (christened James Kern Kyser) was the only one of the children who couldn't carry a tune, but at the age of five he could really beat a tattoo on a soapbox with a toy hammer. Kay has always been full of rhythm, which accounts for that "makes-you-want-to-dance" music.

Stylist

Kays orchestral style was aptly described by a west coast critic as "warm, friendly music, and the keynote is color and contrast; variety, change of pace, slow, pretty music, peppy, joyful tunes, sentiment, comedy, and above all, originality."

Phi Psis Plan Open House For Sunday

Fraternity Doors To Swing Open at 3 For All University

By HERB PENNY

An open house for all University students and faculty members will be given by Phi Kappa Psi from 3 to 7 p.m. Sunday, March 30, when they formally open their new fraternity house. Anyone connected in any way with the University is invited.

Housemothers for the various women's living organizations will be present. Phi Kappa Psi men have been working hard for the past two years on plans for the Early Georgian building beside the millrace. Their old building, torn down last year, occupied the same spot.

Relief

So appreciation will be the byword for the Phi Psis when they throw open the doors of their new house after living out a year.

The approximate total figure for the white brick building will come close to $30,000 when final returns are in. Many alumni chapters have aided, with the Portland group doing the largest job.

There are thirteen large study rooms for the thirty-six men who will be living in next term. The house is shaped like the letter "L" with the living and dining rooms in the long leg.

Pine Den

Also downstairs is a den, finished in knotty pine, a guest room for the overnight friends, and a kitchen. A stairway to the left leads to the upper floors.

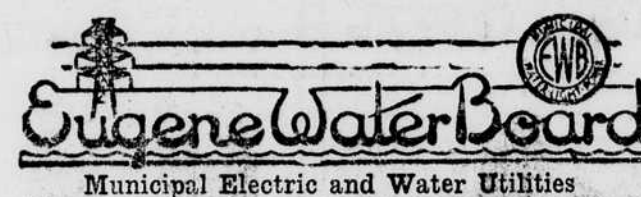

Wherever possible fiberboard and plywood have been used, the only cement being in the stairway. The walls, except for the den, are painted in green. The outside shutters are green also.

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself

YOU don't need a high I.Q. to figure out that the qualities you enjoy in your cigarette are in the smoke itself—the smoke's the thing!

It's quite likely, too, that if you are not already a Camel "fan" you smoke one of the other four brands tested. That's why the scientific findings of the smoke test are of real importance to you.

Science has already pointed out that Camels—by burning slower—give you extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor. Now science confirms another important advantage of slower burning—of Camel's costlier tobaccos—extra freedom from nicotine in the smoke! And the smoke's the thing!

Your dealer is featuring Camels at an attractive carton price. For convenience, for economy—buy by the carton.
