Captain Long To Show Film Friday Evening

Adventurer Brings Movie of Travels In Small Sailboat

Captain Dwight Long, youthful adventurer-author, famous for his two widely-read travel books and unusual experiences, will re-tell the thrilling story of his 32,000-mile cruise around the world, at McArthur court Friday evening. Presenting a two-hour film, Captain Long's lecture will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is free to all students on their activity cards.

Leaving his studies at the University of Washington back in 1934 (he was 21 at the time) Captain Long, in his 32-foot sailboat, the Idle Hour, started a journey which was to take him four and one-half years to complete.

"Seven Seas on a Shoestring," the first book published by the captain, soon reached the "best seller" class and his latest literary adventure, "Sailing All Seas," is rapidly gaining popularity.

Bermuda, Jamaica, Panama, Cocos Island, Bali, and Galapago Isles, and other foreign names that conjure romance and magic in the minds of the untraveled, will be included in the captain's speech. Intimate, unusual details and happenings in each port of call will be told by the young soldier of fortune.

German News Again Returns To Libe Files

Interrupted by the British blockade since the invasion of the lowlands, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, Berlin-published German newspaper, has again made its appearance in the University library mail.

The paper, which arrived regularly at the first of the war and then again when the British relaxed their blockade in the hope of keeping Italy out of the war, had not been received for some time. Willis Warren, periodicals librarian explained that the library does not subscribe to the paper, but that it had come in regularly from its Nazi-controlled publishers.

An Italian periodical, La Critica, has also been coming in regularly, despite war conditions.

Wartime Disrupts Delivery of Books From London Shop

The University library has just received a personal letter in regard to a shipment of historical manuscripts which were ordered from George Harding's Bookshop, Ltd., in London, England. The letter was written by George A. Wheeler, governing director of the shop.

Mr. Wheeler explained that the shop was filing the order and would try to send it immediately. He mentioned in passing that "as you know, the war has made things a bit difficult for us here in England" and that the bookshop staff was somewhat depleted. Aid raids, he said, had done considerable damage but his establishment had suffered only some shattered windows.

Mr. Wheeler mentioned that he had two sons who were busy with the London fire-fighters. He maintained that the English people have great confidence in their leaders and that with the aid which they are now getting from America, they look forward to defeating Germany.

Teaching Positions Equal Last Year's

Opportunities for teacher placement are up to those of last year, according to Miss Ida M. Pope, placement secretary. Calls are mainly for high school positions, with the emphasis on administrative position such as principals and superintendents.

Recently there has been a marked increase in the need for teachers who can fulfill requirements for outside activities in addition to regular teaching duties.
