

Theater to Give Play's Premiere

Kaufman-Hart Drama Scheduled For May 16, 17, 20

By JOANNE NICHOLS

Just as Sinclair Lewis put "Babbitt" into the English language, so Kaufman and Hart have made the Newton Fullers famous in their latest masterpiece, "George Washington Slept Here," to have its amateur premiere in the University theater May 16, 17, and 20.

"George Washington Slept Here" throws the comedy spotlight on city dwellers who decide to buy "a little place in the country." Newton Fuller gets his place where he can hear the birds and bees and smell the air and feel like a country squire.

Unimportant

He even attempts to recite "I think that I shall never see . . ." Such details as no water, no clothes closets, livestock wandering into the house, and even no bathrooms, are to him "insignificant trivialities."

His whole method of getting on through life is the kill-or-cure plan, consisting, for example, in opening a barrel of delicate china with a mighty, almost superman, blow of hammer on chisel.

Chic Sale

Newton's wife, Annabelle, is of the cautious, or look-before-you-leap school. When her husband shows her the remains of the house in which George Washington is supposed to have spent the night and tells her that it is their new home, she exclaims, "You have bought this outhouse?"

Typical of the uproarious situations in which the play abounds are a fireplace that burns beautifully except that all the smoke comes into the room, a collapsible rocking chair, an imposter, a Dead-End Kid nephew, a roof that leaks bucketfuls in a violent cloudburst.

Six BA Students Get Scholarships To N.Y. University

All six marketing students of the University who applied for retailing scholarships at the New York university have been awarded them, Dr. N. H. Comish, business administration professor, announce yesterday.

Students honored were Sarah Ray, Marcia Judkins, Marvin Elle, Leonard Ruecker, Laurita Christofferson, and Allyn Shaw. They will graduate from the BA school this June and begin their work at NYU next fall. Their studies will lead to master's degrees.

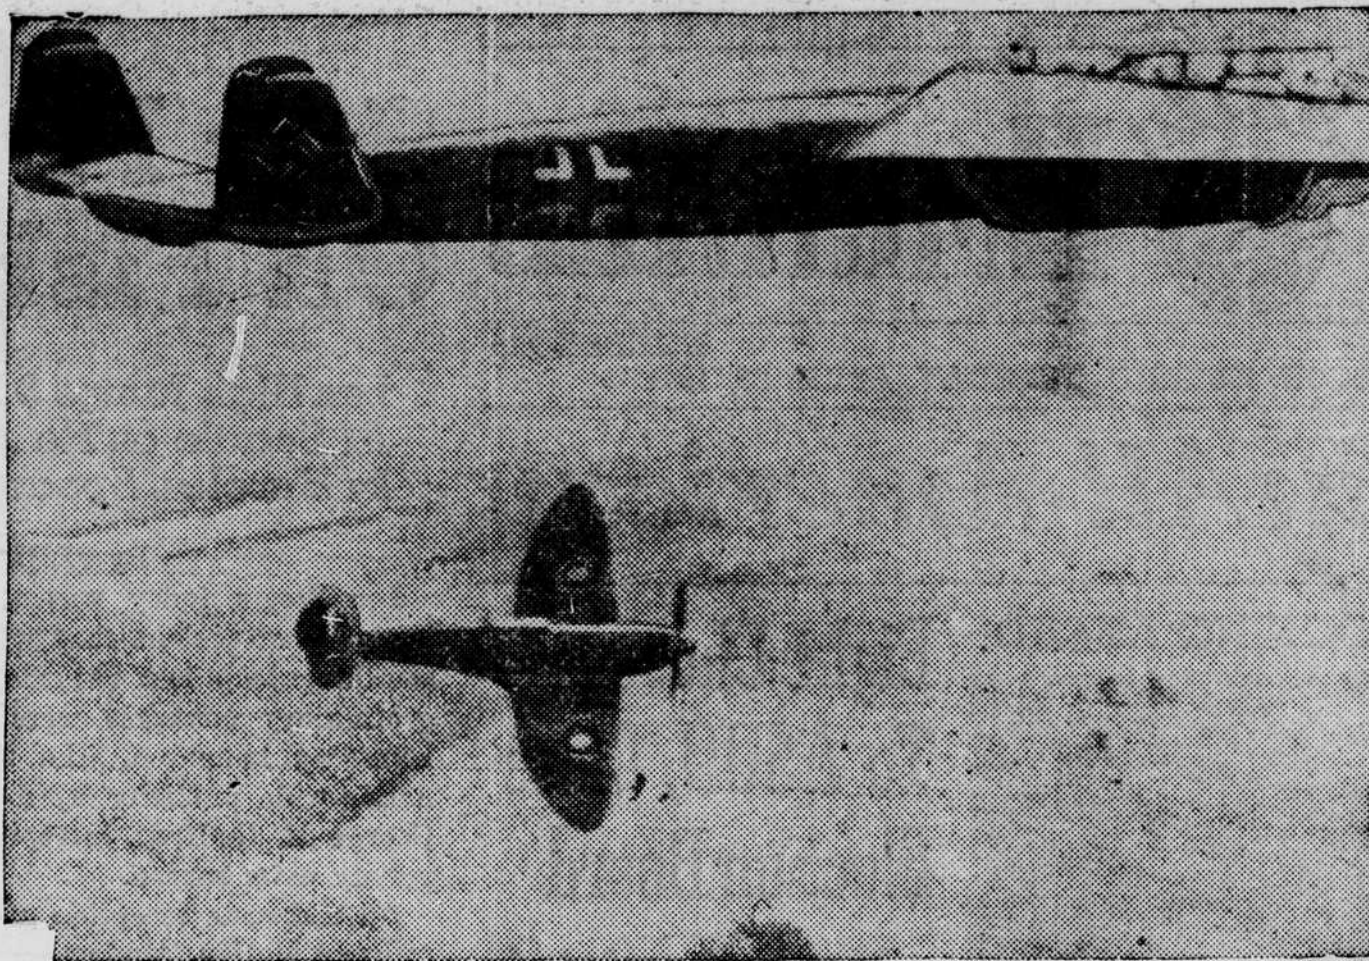

Dean Norris A. Brisco of New York university selected the Oregon winners on the first slate of scholars awarded. The retail course will include field training in New York department stores.

Mom's Day Tickets Go on Sale Today

Tickets for the Mothers' day banquet are now on sale in the office of the housing secretary in Johnson hall. The banquet, to be held Saturday evening at 5:30 o'clock in Gerlinger hall, will be the highlight of the mothers' part of Junior Weekend. Students who wish to take their mothers to the banquet should buy tickets right away as the number available is limited and when these are gone there will be no more sold.

Tickets are one dollar apiece. Already 189 reservations have been made.

SPITFIRE VS. 'FLYING PENCIL'

This picture, released by Nazi censors, shows a German "flying pencil" in combat with a British Spitfire over England. The Spitfire is making a turn, maybe to attack again; the Germans say it is "returning to its base."

Loco Boys Make Good Law Weekend Nears

By FRITZ TIMMEN

The annual law school jam-boree scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, May 3 and 4, with a Saturday afternoon parade as the main attraction, is falling rapidly into form, according to Bob Recken, general chairman.

"After we have crowned our queen, inaugurated our president and duly placed Dean Morse and the faculty on their floats, we will parade through sorority house alley," stated "Uncle George" Recken.

"We will have drum majorettes, a band, and a crack marching unit as royal guard," added William "Goat Ball" Robert, director of athletic relations.

Parade Theme

The main theme of the parade will be "Arabian Siesta, or Love in the Afternoon, or Blackstone Rides Again," in keeping with the Junior Weekend theme of the next week.

Dr. MacKinley Helm Writes of Artists In Modern Mexico

"Modern Mexican Painters," written by MacKinley Helm, ex-'17, was recently published by Harpers Brothers. The book tells of contemporary Mexican art and the Mexican renaissance.

Dr. Helm is an art connoisseur and trustee of the Boston Museum of Modern Art. He is owner of the largest and most important private collection of Mexican art in the United States.

Colonel to Review Oregon ROTC Units

There will be another regimental inspection of University ROTC units here May 7 and 8 when Lieutenant Colonel A. E. Sawkins of the second military area from Portland will conduct a tactical inspection.

This inspection will include all four classes in a dress review and demonstration of tactical training. Colonel D. B. Crafton, commander of the ninth corps area, conducted a similar inspection here two weeks ago.

will receive special attention from the accompanying lawyers, who will march in a body with the floats.

"After the parade and softball game," said Recken, "we will repair to the millrace where (plug) Mr. "Hoke" Smith, entrepreneur of a local business house will donate refreshments. (unplug)"

Outstanding jurists from this and other states, as well as several federal judges and alumni of the school have been invited to the Saturday evening dance at the Anchorage.

Libe Day to Feature Dr. Skiff's Medals

The collected medals of Dr. Frederick W. Skiff, noted Portland collector, will be featured when the University library celebrates its annual Library day May 3.

Dr. Skiff, who collects articles of all types, including furniture, books, prints, etchings, guns, glass, copper, and silver, has been a frequent donor to the University library. His medal collection is representative of the World war.

Mrs. Walter Church of Portland will loan the library about a dozen of her fine bindings. They will also be on display May 3.

Comfy Clothes Win Approval For Exchanges

Campus clothes and outdoor picnics receive the Webfoot vote for spring term exchange deserts, an unrepresentative, inaccurate, an unauthentic, but very interesting campus poll revealed recently.

Most of the students interviewed favored the continuance of the exchange dessert tradition throughout spring term, though some voted to dispense with them. Picnics, Saturday lunches, outdoor games, and terrace and tennis dances appealed to many.

Formals, which were worn several years ago to all dessert dances, received the unanimous "no!" of all interviewees. Short silks were more popular, but campus clothes for spring term desserts were preferred by most of those questioned.

Some cynical students shared the opinion of a disillusioned freshman who wearily declared that fall term desserts are enjoyable, winter term they are passable, and spring term they are horrible.

Candidates to Take Interviews Today

Interviews will be given the four candidates for Emerald and Oregon business managers in the faculty room of Friendly hall at 3 p.m. today, George Root, educational activities manager, announced Monday.

Jim Thayer and Fred May turned in petitions for the Emerald post and Emerson Page and Doug David will be interviewed pertaining to the Oregon.
