

Shop Talk at the Wax Works

By BILL NORENE

Art Holman and his orchestra have been signed by Jack Saltzman to play for the Junior Prom Friday.

Jack explained that the dance is a theme dance, and rather than sign a name band, the Junior Weekened heads decided to keep the dance a campus affair and sign a local band.

According to Jack, Will Osborne (listen to the glisten of the slide trombone), Ted Lewis, Benny Pollack, who played here a couple years ago, and the Andrews Sisters and Johnny Richards' orchestra were considered for the dance.

Outsiders Not Wanted

A series of points as long as your arm are advanced by Saltzman as reasons why Holman is the only orchestra for the dance. They simmer down to: The Junior Prom is a campus dance and they want to keep it that way—outsiders are not wanted; 2) the Junior Prom is a theme dance, not a show; 3) Art Holman has been on the campus a long time and he knows what is wanted for the dance; 4) Holman is making special arrangements of many numbers especially for the dance. Amen.

Bits on the bands: Glenn Miller's Chesterfield show contract was renewed before the old one was finished . . . Tommy Dorsey set a new attendance record Easter Sunday at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City, N. J. . . . He may be on the coast for another movie late in the summer . . . Jan Savitt was born in Petrograd, Russia in 1912 . . . Vaughn Monroe is an alum of Carnegie Tech . . . Enric Madriguera leaves for a South American tour soon . . . Johnny Morris, Tony Pastor's drummer, went through a drum head while taking a chorus of "Paradiddle Joe" recently while the band was broadcasting . . . Larry Clinton took over for Harry James recently when the latter was called to Texas for the funeral of his mother.

Artie Shaw is still in the groove with "Who's Excited?" and "Alone Together" on Victor. Jazz fields will like Johnny Hodges' "That's the Blues Old Man" and "Queen Bess" on Bluebird, and Louis Armstrong's "I Cover the Waterfront" and "Long Long Ago" on Decca. Hodges leads a unit from Duke Ellington's orchestra.

Mrs. Sally Allen As Centenarian Plus

By MARY WOLF

A vindictive 101-year-old woman portrayed by Mrs. Sally Allen, wife of Dean Eric W. Allen of the journalism school, kept a Very Little Theater audience in the best of spirits during the performance of "Whiteoaks of Jalna" last night at the county fairgrounds.

As the play, which was adopted by Mazo de la Roche from characters and incidents depicted in the series of novels based on the Whiteoak family of Jalna estate, was built around the character played by Mrs. Allen, she had plenty of opportunity and took it to walk away with the play.

Ruling a selfish clan who cater to her wishes in expectation that she might leave her money to any one of them, Mrs. Allen seems to enjoy herself immensely throughout the play.

All the characters are well-cast. Renny, Fred Cuthbert, keeps everything under control as the only level-headed member of the clan.

Most side-splitting of any of the scenes was the one in which Mrs. Allen has someone fetch her false teeth and proceeds to insert them with gusto.

Under the direction of Daisy Hamlin, the play will have two more showings tonight and tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Very Little theater.

Class Proposes

president, Pat Lawson; secretary, Dorothy Jean Johnson, and treasurer, Mack Hand.

Others may be nominated by petitions signed by 25 class members turned in to Class President Lou Torgeson before 5 p.m. today, however. Torgeson expressed a desire to have more candidates in the field for election of senior class officers Thursday.

Classmen took no action on either the "10-cent class card" issue or on the constitutional amendment to distinguish juniors from sophomores, because a quorum was not present at last night's meeting.

Both these questions will be determined at all-campus elections Thursday, Torgeson said.

Small Vote

Torgeson ascribed the small attendance to the fact that many students did not receive Emeralds yesterday morning.

The political hats of nine freshmen are in the ring for seats on the "council" of the "majority" class of 1944.

Petitions nominating Fred Smith and Bruce Taylor were presented at a "majority" class meeting last night. The following were nominated from the floor for council seats:

Fern Swanstrom, Beverly Padgham, Beauford Clemens, Chuck Woodfield, Tom Burbee, Ted Goodwin, and Stan Weber.

"Eligibility Test"

Nominees must pass an "eligibility test" over campus government and parliamentary law, before they will be eligible for election Thursday.

Time and place of eligibility examinations will be set by Marvin E. Krenk, class adviser. Further details on the examination will be printed in the Emerald soon, according to Chuck Woodruff, president of the "majority" class.

Members of the class of 1943 will nominate candidates at 4 p.m. today in Villard hall, according to Class President Bud Vandeneinde. They will also discuss the ten-cent class card proposal and make plans for the class party.

Side Show

"I guess Hitler doesn't give medals to Pacifists."

She laughed again in a contagious way and said she didn't suppose he would give her one either.

Still "Free Speech"

Then Mrs. Roosevelt said she had read an editorial that morning which charged that Lindbergh was being denied freedom of speech. She said so far as she knew no one was trying to deny him free speech, but that at the same time when he publicly declares that this nation cannot possibly win against Hitler then it is permissible for anyone who wishes to do so to point out the similarity between Lindbergh's position and that of other factions at other crises in American history.

The reference to "ther factions" was apparently a reference to her husband's charge that the flier was another Vallandigham, leader of the "copperheads" in the civil war; but before the point could be clarified the secretary remarked that it was growing late and that Mrs. Roosevelt had to eat dinner before leaving for her lecture.

Mrs. Roosevelt rose and she seemed very tall. She smiled another one of those warm smiles, ushered the three of us to the door, and shook hands in farewell. This action was characteristic of her, just another evidence of her spontaneous gift for liking people which has endeared her to so many. One doesn't have to agree with her in order to regard her with profound admiration.

Kirkpatrick Nails High Rifle Honors

William Kirkpatrick, junior from Baker, took individual high scoring honors in the ninth corps area William Randolph Hearst rifle matches, it was learned Thursday. The Oregon rifle team won third place for this area.

Kirkpatrick will receive a personal award and the team will receive a plaque, according to Captain Harvey Blythe, instructor. John Boettiger, editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, expressed regret that he will be unable to present the awards in person. Awards will be presented at the last regular drill period of the term, Colonel R. M. Lyon, head of the University military department, announced.

University marksmen have won the national trophy in the Hearst matches three times. Last year they won second place. Each member of the rifle team will be presented a medal for outstanding shooting.

Col. Lyon to Speak

Col. Robert M. Lyon, head of the military science department, will address the Community Liberal church on "Hawaii" Sunday evening at 7:30.
