

Nick Begleries Blanks Huskies, 6-0

POSTS FULLBACK BID

Frosh Eye Rook Nine

After four days of leisurely loafing around, the yearling baseball club got down to some hard work on Howe field after the Husky-Duck fray Tuesday to get ready for their game with the Oregon State rooks next Saturday.

With spring football concluded, John Warren gets two more recruits for his squad. Larry Olsen and Tom Oxman will exchange shoulder pads and cleats for bats and gloves to bolster Warren's club.

Second Basemen

Both players are second basemen, but Warren stated that Olsen might be tried at the hot corner, third base.

The Ducklings will take on their big brothers, the varsity, this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Howe field. Although their bats had been silent for some time, the yearlings had little trouble getting the range again as they knocked them far and wide during a batting practice. Bob Farrow and Dick Burns both hit long ones that lit dangerously close to the embankment in left field.

Rumors from the Beaver lair at Corvallis, substantiated by box scores in the papers, indicate that the yearling squad from Oregon State is a power house and should give the Ducklings a busy morning Saturday.

Hendricks Hallers Top Alpha Phi, 15-1

The Alpha Phi club yesterday lost a lop-sided five-inning game to Hendricks hall, 15 to 1. Georgia Hartman scored the only Alpha Phi run.

The clicking Hendricks team proved mystifying to the Phis for three innings adding 8 of the 15 runs. Eleanor Sederstrom took over mound duties during the first two innings, but was replaced by Janet Farnham and Sue Brogan.

Jim Newquist, the "Camas Cyclone," proved Saturday in the final scrimmage of the year that his football prowess was something to be reckoned with when Coach Tex Oliver dishes out starting berths next fall. Newquist shined offensively and defensively at fullback on many plays.

Nick Begleries Heads Oregon Pitching Staff

Pete Igoe, Oregon right-hander, is the leading Webfoot pitcher in the won and lost column, but it is Nick "Busher" Begleries, who walks off with most of the other pitching records to date.

Begleries has seen more action than the rest of his pitching staff teammates, facing 119 opposing batters in 32 innings and allowing only 10 runs to be scored against him, of which nine were earned for an earned run average of 2.52.

Igoe Leads With Strikeouts

Igoe with four wins to his credit as against no losses leads in strikeouts with 24, while Begleries has had more trouble putting in the third strike. Nick has walked 14. He is also second in the win column with three while losing one—the only Oregon loss of the season.

Five Netters Near Finals

Entrants in the all-campus tennis singles tournament are urged by the intramural department to complete the playoffs as soon as possible.

Nathan Ail, Jim Browne, Lee Flatberg, Bill Moxley, and Ox Wilson are ready to move into the semifinals. The tournament was to have been completed by the end of this week. The end of this competition will finish this year's all-campus program.

Duck Nine Maces Seven Hits, Hands Out Another Defeat

By KEN CHRISTIANSON
Co-Sports Editor, Oregon Emerald

Little Nick Begleries, Oregon's sophomore pitcher, stretched seven hits over a full nine innings yesterday and, with his heavy-hitting mates, handed Washington's baseball team its fourth consecutive setback of the road trip, 6 to 0. The win was Oregon's first shutout victory of the season and its seventh win as against one defeat.

Warren Sierer, Husky hurler, allowed a like number of hits to the Ducks, but he also mixed in some wild and wicked pitches which flitted dangerously close to the heads of the Oregon hitters. Five Washington errors at inopportune moments helped in the Oregon conquest.

Surprisingly enough, Begleries was the heavy sticker at the plate for Oregon. Usually a light hitter, Begleries stepped into two pitches and sent them into center and right field, pounding out these two blows in three trips to the plate.

Bill Calvert and John Bubalo hit extra base blows for the Ducks. Calvert slugged out a triple which drove Bubalo home, leading off a four-run inning. Bubalo socked out a double.

Dalthorp and Gordon Norm Dalthorp and Dave Gordon led the Washington attack at the plate. Each secured two clouts in four trips to the plate. No Washington base runner reached third base at any time during the game. The Huskies placed men on second base three times—all run-threats died sudden deaths due in great part to three double plays contributed by the fast Oregon infield.

Oregon put Dick Whitman's hit and an error together in the first inning to place Whitman on second. Buck Berry's single to center field scored Whitman. Oregon's hitters were tied down from there on in until the big seventh inning. Begleries collected the only other hit in the fifth, but Don Kirsch hit into a Washington double play, retiring the Oregon side.

The hit-crazy Webfoots hit around in the seventh. Sierer walked Bubalo, who was sacrificed to second by Bill Carney. Calvert's triple sent Bubalo home at a snail pace. Calvert was cut off at the plate as Hamel's bunt was fielded by Third Baseman Cy Stephens.

Kirsch Hits Single
Begleries' second hit sent Hamel to third base. Kirsch slapped out a single and Hamel scored. Begleries and Kirsch came home on successive errors on the play by the Husky shortstop and pitcher, who both misplayed Whitman's clout.

This ended the Oregon scoring with the exception of Bubalo's double to Left Fielder Gordon who made two errors all by himself in attempting to stop Bubalo's progress around the bases.

After many months of bickering, coeds at New Britain (Conn.) Teachers' college have convinced the faculty that ankle socks are a proper part of campus attire.
