Rain Drives Netmen Off Courts; OSC Next

Rain poured down on the University courts yesterday, even before Oregon's varsity netmen could shed campus clothes and trot out to swat a few balls over the net in a practice round. Downed 6 matches to 1 last Saturday by the Washington Huskies, Coach Paul Washke's Ducks have Oregon State on their list for a battle next Saturday.

Oregon is roosting even in the won and lost columns both in team and individual matches. The Ducks split on their thrust through the inland empire, squeezing out a 4 to 3 victory over Idaho's Vandals and losing by an identical score to Washington State. The Webfoots then waxed Oregon State 6 to 1, and were drubbed here over the weekend by Washington.

Clark Falters

A disappointment to Oregon net fans is Len Clark, No. 1 singles man. Clark flashed brilliant tennis last year to sweep through all opposition in dual jousts, climaxing this exhibition by slashing to the Pacific coast northern division singles title in the Seattle play-offs. The No. 1 Webfoot netster appears to have slipped a bit this year, winning but two of the four singles matches he's played.

In doubles, however, it's a different story. Clark and Kerm Smith are undefeated to date in conference play.

Other Netters

Remainder of the Webfoot personnel include Frank Baker, Norm Wiener, and Johnny Williams. Baker, last year's No. 1 frosh racquet wielder, graduated into the No. 3 spot on the varsity squad. Baker has improved over last year and should bat it out with Smith for the No. 1 spot when Clark leaves at the end of this season via graduation.

Williams, transfer from Multnomah college, has consistently seen action in No. 4. Wiener, who sacrificed the northern division trek when law school studies became heavy, climbed up at mid-season to hold the No. 5 spot.

Frosh Clip Salem Hi

Al Wimer mixed up some mystifying southpaw slants Monday to hurl four-hit ball and set the Salem ball club down, 9 to 1. Still smarting from a double setback from the Oregon State rooks in which their bats had been stifled, the frosh boomed out against the capital city boys with an even dozen hits.

Bob Farrow, Bill Bishop, and Wimer led the hitting barrage put up by the frosh, each collecting two hits. Ballard clouted out a long triple. Every hitter for the frosh that tramped up to the plate came out with at least one hit recorded in the score book.

At field the frosh also came up with some sparkling ball playing as they went through the full nine innings without booting any.

The frosh will have another fling at the Oregon State yearling club next Friday when the two meet for their third game on Howe field.

Oregon Nine Invades Cougar Lair Today

Duck Bats Defy WSC

By TOMMY WRIGHT

Sometime this morning Oregon's Webfoot diamonders arrive in Pullman, Washington, and this afternoon they take the field against Wild Buck Bailey's gas house Cougar nine.

Nick Begleries, diminutive right-hander, will probably be Coach Hobby Hobson's choice to hurl against the hard luck Cougars, and if the "Busher" can check WSC the Ducks will be well on the way to their third conference championship in five years.

After today's game, the Ducks face five conference and one non-conference games in seven days. An even split on the road trip should prove the necessary margin to put the Lemon and Green team in possession of the 1941 pennant.

Seven Games

Tomorrow the Webfoots' "murderer's row" plays the Cougars again. Friday they move across the Idaho border for games with the Vandals Friday and Saturday. Sunday the team travels back to Seattle for a two-game series there. On Wednesday of next week on the return trip they stop over in Portland for a one-game stand against the University of Portland Pilots.

Hank Bushman, right-handed Indian curveballer, will probably get the starting assignment for the Cougars against the hit-crazy Ducks. Bushman was very effective against Oregon here for five innings as a relief hurler but weakened under a tenth-inning rally to drop the game, 5 to 4.

Pete Igoe will probably pitch for Oregon in Thursday's game.

The return of First-Baseman Chuck Clifford to the Duck lineup once again places the hard-driving Hobson proteges in full force.

State Meet Billed Here

By WALLY HUNTER

While the University of Oregon officials are busier than a two-fingered typist making preparations for them, a galaxy of prep high school stars are biding their time waiting for the 15th annual Oregon state high school track and field championships. Over 200 athletes will enter.

Fritz Kramer, Eugene high school coach, who is holding drawings for heats and lanes will be held here Friday, as soon as all district entry lists are in.

Chief difficulties of the Oregon officials is the straightening out of entry lists of three districts. Ties for places in these districts puts a crimp in plans. These events will have to be run off again because only two men in each event can be entered in the state.

Duo Signs 'A' Contracts

The Eugene Athletics, members of the state baseball league, Tuesday announced the signing of Don Kirsch, fleet-footed second baseman, and Bill Carney, strong-armed outfielder, both of whom are stars on the Oregon Webfoots northern division leaders.

It will be the third semi-pro season for Kirsch, who has played
