

Opportunity Raps; On the Boat, Lads!

By BOB WHITELY

In Wednesday's Emerald there was a sterling article on the gal's side of this Mortar Board situation . . . how they rack what brains they have to take the right boy, etc. . . . Why not give the fellas a break and have a look at them?

It is every boy's privilege to be late at least once . . . and I don't care if the girls DO disagree. There is nothing better than when your date . . . (if you are in the lucky 400) calls for you at your house, and finding out who it is, you turn right around and head for the smoking room for 10 more minutes of bull with the boys . . . that's just the way the girls do it, why can't you once a year?

Interest Her

Let her talk to the house mother, if you have one. or the house manager will be on hand to discuss the rising cost of living if they are in want of conversation.

After you have checked all the seams in your socks, ruffled your hair devastatingly and have floated down the stairs as gracefully as possible, you confront your date with a "My, ain't I pretty . . . and thanks for the corsage of carrots and brussel sprouts . . . I can nibble on them during intermission. (Only the smoother element rate real boutonnières..)

Teach Her

From there on it is entirely up to you. If you have put the idea of a sizzling steak dinner across, more power to you . . . and, of course, all the accessories that go with it. Don't complain of the transportation. Make her open the doors for you, and let you out . . . if she's big enough, sit on her lap . . . let her get out of the car half paralyzed for a change. Make her put on your coat . . . dump all your combs, Kleenex and dental floss in her handbag for a change. If she offers you a coke . . . take it, you may not get another chance.

Mortar Board is quite an affair. It's the only time that men are men, and are darned glad of it.

Art Collection Shown Today

Three-Divisional Display Illustrates Recent Movements

Going on display today in the little gallery of the art school is a special exhibit entitled "Twenty 20th Century Paintings." This representative selection of recent art is being circulated among museums and colleges throughout the United States by New York's famous Museum of Modern Art.

Divided into three main groups—still life, portraits and landscapes—the collection clearly shows the contrasts and comparisons in different artists' approach to similar subjects. Nearly all the important movements in twentieth century painting are illustrated.

European and American artists represented in the collection are: Bonnard, Braque, Brook, Derain, Dickinson, Dix, Ernst, Gris, Kantor, Kopman, Modigliani, Roy, Soutine, Spencer, Tanguy, Utrillo, Vivin, Vlaminck, and Weber.

Oregon Leads In Pilot Output

Fall Fliers Should Sign Immediately; Classes to Close

"Only three universities in the United States have turned out more private pilots through the civil pilot training program than has the University of Oregon," it was announced by J. C. Stovall, assistant director of the CPT program.

Mr. Stovall revealed that of the 674 institutions which have sponsored the program, only eight beside the top three—Stanford, University of California, and the University of Alabama, have even tied our record of 210 students in the last two years. Of this number 21 girls took the course.

No one will be able to register for the fall term primary course here after the end of this term, Mr. Stovall stated, since the office will be contacting accepted applicants during the summer and the classes will begin immediately after school starts.

In regard to the national CPT program, Mr. Stovall said that recent changes and expansion have formed three new courses—cross country, student instructor and a review course which will take the flyer up to his commercial pilot license with 200 hours in the air.

Footlights to Shine On Broadway Hit May 16, 17, 20

A rusty plow, a garden hose, and an old oil can are some of the problems of property men for "George Washington Slept Here," Kaufman-Hart hit to open in the University theater May 16, 17, and 20.

In addition to these, property men must handle a barrel of china, a hammer and chisel with which to demolish it, fireplace soot, dripping rain, and clouds of smoke.

Even harder to keep on hand than smoke clouds are a bag of candy, a woman's purse containing 10 cents, and five bottles of Scotch.

Sound effects men have their worries, too. They must reproduce the sounds china makes when smashed inside a barrel, radio static, thunder, rain, wind, banging shutters, and clattering doors.

No difficulty should be experienced in the recreation of the familiar "razzberry," and only slightly more with the call of the yellow-breasted barn swallow, a saw, and a lawnmower.

But the sound effects men may be pardoned if they quail slightly when they find "well-drill" and "fly buzz" on the list of sounds to be reproduced.

WHERE TO GO To DINE and DANCE MUSIC AND FUN

By NORMA BAKER

The Anchorage is an ideal spot to enjoy that refreshing and cooling afternoon coke.

Seymour's has just the delicious delicacies that will put your picnic over with a bang.

For real entertainment, the Eugene theaters are offering a wide variety of programs to their patrons this weekend.

After the dance drive to Hickerson's 2x4 curb service drive in. Quick efficient service, and good food.

Girls—if you plan to take your Mortar Board dates to dinner—remember the Eugene Hotel dining room. Best food at reasonable prices.

No beverage has the same tang without Ted's mixers. Be sure to get your weekend supply.

Girls! After Mortar Board

Bring your date out to Hickerson's for an after-date snack.
