

Student Fliers Get Deferment

First, Second Year CPT Pilots Exempt While in Training

All students who are now taking the primary or advanced civil pilot training program, will be deferred from selective service for the duration of their training, it was announced by J. C. Stovall, assistant CPT director, after receiving a letter from the Oregon state director of selective service.

Mr. Stovall said that the letter also indicated that those students physically qualified who had applied for either the primary or advanced training would also be exempted with due consideration given by the local draft board to their adaptability, ability to learn, and the possibilities of any desire simply to evade military service.

In regard to the local office, Mr. Stovall said that no applications for the next fall program can be accepted after the end of this term since the entire "flying 50" list must be compiled before the end of the summer. He stated that the Fenton hall office was still accepting applications for the summer training course.

Adams Heads TDX

Tau Delta Chi, men's professional business honorary, elected Allen Adams president for next year at a meeting Monday, May 19. Other officials elected were Hugh Muir, vice-president; David Knox, secretary-treasurer; Leonard Farr, alumni secretary.

Emerald Workers Will Feast Tonight

Oregon Daily Emerald combined staffs: editorial, news, sports, and business, will hold their annual banquet at 5:45 today in the Eugene hotel.

Dean Eric Allen of the journalism school will act as toastmaster. Next year's editor and business manager, Helen Angell and Fred May will announce future plans and appointments.

Retiring Editor Lyle Nelson and Managing Editor Jim Leonard will sing their swan songs. Nelson will present 12 Emerald "O's" and Leonard six. Emerald certificates for outstanding work on the paper will also be awarded.

Additional features of the program will be a talk by George Root, educational activities manager, a song by Pat Woods, and a reading by Norma Baker.

The outstanding senior man in journalism will be presented the Hall-Turnbull plaque as a special feature.

Those who plan to attend must have signed up on their staff bulletin boards by noon today.

Seniors Will Hold Free Dance June 6

Graduating seniors and dates will dance at Willamette park Friday, June 6, to Art Holman's orchestra. Free to all graduating seniors, tickets may be obtained at the ASUO office after June 2.

Free bus service from the College Side to the park and back will be furnished to persons who don't have transportation. The dance will be from 9 to 12 in the evening.

Bill Ehrman is in charge of dance plans.

'Pest-House' Boy Gets 'Job' Done Inside

The built-in bed-warmer for this week goes to Calvin Kent. After gagging, gurgling, spitting, and sputtering through a thorough paint job on both right and left tonsils, the nurse asked, "Did I miss any spots?"

"Yes, I think you skipped my appendix," Kent answered.

Shut-ins Tuesday were: Mary Shaw, Nancy Gardner, Eloise Rockwell, Trudy Harland, Milodene Goss, Jean Spearow, Shirley Ralph, George Olson, Jim Parsons, Gordon Olcott, Bill Cathey, and Kent.

W. D. Smith Writes Of Wallowa Region For Late Bulletin

The latest bulletin issued by the state department of geology and mineral industries, consists of an article by Dr. Warren D. Smith, head of the geology and geography departments, entitled "Geology and Physiography of the Northern Wallowa Mountains." Pictures of the area are included, with a large colored map of the Wallowa lake quadrangle.

Dr. L. W. Staples, instructor in geology, did petrography for the publication, and John E. Allen and Wayne R. Lowell of the department of geology and mineral industries assisted in collecting material for it.

Coed Journalists Will Discuss Work

Tables will be turned on women journalists May 27 when Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary, holds its annual job forum in the alumni room of Gerlinger at 8:15 p.m. Instead of interviewing, members of the organization will be interviewed with an eye to getting tips on job hunting.

Jack McDowell, managing editor, and Clifford McDowell, business manager, of the Eugene Daily News will conduct sample interviews. At the same time they will constructively criticize application letters submitted to them for approval.

The job forum is designed to assist women in applying for jobs in any phase of journalistic work, including reporting, advertising, and business. The meeting is open to all persons interested in these fields.

Girls wishing to submit letters for criticism are requested by Pat Parker, Theta Sig president, to place their written applications in Professor George Turnbull's office in the journalism school. Five o'clock Friday, May 23, has been set as the deadline for entries. Letters may be written in any form, and entered signed or unsigned, according to the author's wish.

Music Honorary Presents Recital

A pleasant little program of chamber and vocal music, without any great pretensions but with a nice quota of entertainment value, was given Tuesday night in the University of Oregon music auditorium by members of Mu Phi Epsilon, national honor society for upperclass women in music.

Prelude to the program was Gade's "Allegro Animato," from that composer's Trio, Opus 42. Emile Chan, pianist, Mary Booth, cellist, and Jane Young, violinist—three young women with considerable reputation for their skill at their respective instruments—brought out some pleasant harmonies in their rendition.
