

New Plays Invade University Theater

Season tickets to University theater plays will be available this year, giving the purchaser four plays for the price of three, drama division officials announced Monday. Holders of the $1.50 season tickets will be allowed to select seats at University theater productions before sales are thrown open to the general public.

The theater will continue its policy of offering outstanding plays, division officials said, adding that although most of them will be from the contemporary theater, there will be some of the more worthwhile of the older plays. They cited recent productions of such plays as "Berkeley Square," "Night Must Fall," "George Washington Slept Here," "Dangerous Corner," "Touchwood," "Shining Hour," and "The Trial of Mary Dugan," as examples of this policy.

As soon as production rights are released the division will consider presentation of "Arsenic and Old Lace," "My Sister Eileen," "Claudia," "The Corn Is Green," "Life With Father," and "Watch on the Rhine."

The production rights to the following plays, which are under immediate consideration, have been released, "Philadelphia Story," and "The Yellow Jacket."

Season tickets will be sold in McArthur court, during registration.

The United States' belligerent attitude toward Japanese has at least one good side to it. Stanford women are at last giving up the struggle against classroom runs in their silk stockings and buying flat-heels and bobbie socks.

Campus Calendar

Kwamas and Skull and Dagger are to meet tonight at 6 o'clock at the Chi Psi lodge, and Phi Thetas and the rally squad are to meet at the ATO house at the same time to lead the snowball Stanford rally to the law school.

All houses are asked to have 5:30 dinner tonight in order that members may attend the snowball rally at 6 o'clock.

All Y. M. C. A. cabinet members and membership workers will meet at the "Y" hut Thursday at 4 p. m.

Emerald Workers To Meet Tuesday

Staff organization for the Oregon Daily Emerald will get under way next Tuesday night, when new and old students interested in working on the daily meet in Room 105, Journalism building, to apply for initial assignments.

Scheduled for 7:30 p. m., the meeting will consist of introduction of upper staff members to the new staff workers, and personal interviews with prospective workers.

Positions in reporting, copyediting, night staff, sports, and society are yet to be filled, according to Editor Helen Angell.
