

10 Drama Tickets Go on Sale Today

Season tickets to the University theater plays can be purchased today in Johnson hall, drama division official announced.

These tickets which sell for $1.50 give the holder admission to four plays for the price of three as well as entitling him to choose seats before the sales are thrown open to the general public.

The production rights to two plays which are being considered for presentation, "Philadelphia Story" and "The Yellow Jacket" have been released. The division also plans to consider presentation of "Arsenic and Old Lace," "My Sister Eileen," "Claudia," "The Corn Is Green," "Life With Father," and "Watch on the Rhine" as soon as production rights are released.

Outstanding plays which have been presented on this campus before through the drama division include "Berkeley Square," "Night Must Fall," "George Washington Slept Here," "Dangerous Corner," "Touchwood," "Shining Hour," and "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

The plays which will be selected for production will include some from both the contemporary theater and from the more worthwhile of the older plays, the drama division officials said.

Places Still Open On Oregana Staff

Editorial staff of the Oregana, University yearbook, will meet Tuesday in the Oregana office at McArthur court from 2 to 5 p. m.

About forty or fifty jobs remain to be filled, and include assistants to the executive editors, secretaries, typists, artists, etc.

All students interested in working on the editorial staff of the yearbook should come to the Oregana office.

Freshman Charter

The motion to adopt the constitution was put before the assembly again, and was passed by a voice vote. The preponderance of "ayes" left no doubt as to its validity.

Following this, Torgeson announced that the class would meet again Thursday evening to nominate officers and to adopt by-laws. It was under these by-laws, he said, that the class-card question would be considered.

Until the class-card question is decided, Torgeson said last night, freshmen will be identified by a door list. Later the cards will either be distributed free or charged for, as the by-laws may provide.

Lottery Tactics Will Determine Partners For Dormitory Dance

By TED GOODWIN

Checks, please? Something like this will be the password at an all-dorm dance tonight at 8 o'clock in John Straub hall.

Don't dress up, don't date up, just show up. At the door each girl will have a baggage tag pinned on and the stub torn off. The stubs will be stirred up and the bashful males will each draw one.

Clutching their tags the men will proceed along the line of winning women until they spy the one whose number has been drawn. Chuck Cutler, promoter of the dance, warned that there will be no deferments and the penalty for evading will be severe.

After 15 minutes in which to dance and get acquainted, the stubs will be mixed up again and the process will start over. Some probably feel that 15 minutes is not enough time in which to get acquainted and will keep their stubs, Cutler said. This type of evasion may result in some lifetime friendships.

Those who instigated the dance gave up trying to find a name or a slogan to fit the occasion and concentrated on planning a sort of junior hello dance.
