

Radio Workshop To Present Drama

Next Thursday evening the University Radio Workshop will present a drama, entitled "And Their Dreams Came True." It will be broadcast from the campus over KOAC during the regular student hour from 7:30 to 8:30.

The play is a story of the founding of the University of Oregon. Judge Deady, then president of the board of regents, made the first commencement address in Deady hall. Excerpts from this speech will be used in the play. The story traces the development of a university and carries the audience through the first session of school. There were 80 students registered at that time. Some of the first rules of the campus will be mentioned.

Berniece Frenetovich, a transfer from Marylhurst college, will sing several operatic numbers. Wallace Bullard will accompany her at the piano and also play several solo numbers.

A number of Columbia Workshop plays will be broadcast from time to time over this student hour.

Bob Frazier has been named editor of the book and he will choose his own committee in the near future.

Mr. Staff Reigns In Leisurely Post As Ghost Professor

Mr. Staff—grand old man of the faculty—drew requests from freshmen this year just as he has done every year since year schedules, catalogs, and prankish upperclassmen invaded the tall fir campus.

According to reliable reports, five Ducklings ardently bent on pursuing English literature, etc., decided that this hoary genius, who teaches everything from philosophy to typesetting, should be the all-around scholar they saw pictured in the paper with an Oxford robe on his shoulder and a degree from Heidelberg clutched in one pale hand.

Alas, poor Professor Staff will just have to keep on taking a cussing until some linotype man has a heart and puts "X" for unknown profs.

University YMCA Opens Annual Drive

The University YMCA is beginning its annual membership drive, according to Dan Bacot, student secretary. The purpose of the organization, Bacot stated, is to promote study, discussion, church attendance, and general social well being among students.

There are several discussion groups ranging from world affairs to various types of campus problems. Those interested in membership may see Dan Bacot any afternoon in the Y hut, he said. The dues for the school year are $1, Bacot announced.

Two Greek Houses Victims of Theft

Two campus fraternities, Phi Kappa Psi and Kappa Sigma, were victims of theft Friday night, September 19.

The Kappa Sigma house was robbed of clothing and books between 7:30 and 12 while the members were attending the Hello dance. Don Cawlee lost a two-year letterman sweater. A yellow sport jacket, books, and a green overcoat were stolen from other men in the house.

Sometime after 3 a.m. the Phi Psi house lost $300 in bills that the boys had left in their rooms as they slept on the sleeping porch in the back of the house. Two watches were stolen, one from the dresser of a guest, Dr. Harry Beckwith as he slept. No other articles or house funds were missing.

According to one of the Phi Kappa Psi house members the burglary seemed to indicate a systematic plan, as none of the rooms were disturbed or no loose change was taken.
