

In Time With the Tunes

By RUBY JACKSON

It seems as though all the symphony orchestras cease broadcasting during the summer, but this is October, and many of them are releasing their winter broadcasting schedules.

Starting its hundredth year of performances is the New York Philharmonic orchestra, which boasts of being the oldest symphonic organization in the country. In celebration, a special concert season has been planned, and many famous conductors have been contracted for broadcasts. Broadcasts are heard over CBS at 11 a.m. Sundays. Program next week will feature such selections as Beethoven's Seventh symphony and the Nocturne and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

Guest Orchestras

Columbia is also inaugurating a series of Tuesday afternoon broadcasts to be heard at 4 p.m. Concert orchestras from such institutions as the Eastman School of Music will be guests on the program.

For Sunday evening listening check the Ford Sunday evening hour, CBS, 6-7 p.m., and a whole string of fine programs of KSL. These latter include choral music, orchestral music, and organ concerts.

Tibbett Near

Tuesday night starts the NBC symphony broadcasts, heard last year under the direction of Toscanini on Saturday nights. A series of guest conductors will appear with the orchestra this year.

Reports come to us that Lawrence Tibbett was at his best in the recent performance of "Rigoletto" in Portland. Too bad that the operas were scheduled for such a time as the middle of the term. This prohibited the attendance of those students who might have gone up.

If you are particularly interested in modern music, I refer you to an article in the American Mercury for September entitled "The Sterility of Modern Music." Not too technical, and interesting.

Composition Classes Put in Three Groups

English composition classes have been divided into three groups: the regular section, the star section, and the English K section.

The basis for the transfer was the student's work during the first two weeks of school. About 45 students were advanced into the star section and will complete three terms, work in two terms, enabling them to take an elective instead of the regular spring term composition.

Arts League Elects Jon Kemp President

Jon Kemp was elected president of the Allied Arts league at a meeting Monday. Kemp is an art major in architecture. Marian Marks, in the department of drawing and painting, was chosen as secretary and treasurer.

It was decided that the Allied Arts league hold a dance in the art school every two weeks from 3 to 5 p.m. There will be no admission charged, except for the purchase of records at intervals.

A congressional committee has refused to approve a request for $650,000 for a new stadium at the United States naval academy.

Worship Group To Meet Today

The Westminster worship group will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in their house at 1414 Kincaid street to study the technique of formulating and organizing a worship course.

The program is under the direction of Mrs. J. D. Bryant. The course, which is planned for four or five weeks, will cover the various kinds of services, the arrangement of materials, the collection of equipment, and the coordination of all these points.

This group will also have charge of the 15-minute Sunday morning and evening worship programs at the house as well as radio services during the term.

Speaks to League

Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed will speak to the girls' league of Franklin high school in Portland Thursday on "The Kind of Girl Universities Want."

The subject was chosen by the girls.

More Men Living Out; Coed Groups Gain

According to statistics released Monday by Mrs. Evangeline Morris, housing secretary, more than two-and-a-half times as many men as women are living outside of campus organizations this year.

There are 541 men living out this year compared to 744 last fall, a drop of 203. Last fall only 188 women were living out; this year there are 216, an increase of 28.

Bird Bangers Meet

The newly-formed badminton club will hold its second meeting of the term Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on the sun-porch of Gerlinger hall. Members are to bring their own racquets, but shuttlecocks will be furnished them.

To prevent spread of tuberculosis, New York city's four municipal colleges now require X-ray examinations of the chests of all entering students.

Westminsters Discuss Plans

Forty students attended the breakfast and discussion of aims and purposes held at Westminster house Sunday morning.

The officers of the organization gave a report of their plans for the year and then the group, following a discussion, decided that the purpose of Westminster organizations was to further fellowship, education, and self expression.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Bryant, former University students, played a piano and flute duet as a prelude to both the morning and evening program.

In the evening Dr. Paul B. Means, new religion professor, related his experiences in Europe and Germany and outlined the situation in Europe. Following this the students discussed what the United States should do.

Occidental college alumni have issued an "Occidental Who's Who."

Dean Back from State Teachers Conference

Dean R. W. Leighton of the physical education department returned to his office Saturday after a four-day session at the Eastern Oregon division of the Oregon State Teachers' association meeting at Pendleton.

Dean Leighton spoke to the physical education group on responsibilities of P.E. teachers in the defense program, and also spoke at the alumni luncheon.

Honor Society Elects

Leila Nelson, senior in sociology, was elected president of Alpha Kappa Delta, national sociology honorary, at its first meeting Thursday. Alice Joy Frizzell is the new vice-president, and Nanette Schmuki will take over duties of the secretary-treasurer.

Next meeting of the society will be Thursday, October 16, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting place will be arranged and announced later.
