Original Plays Tonight On Radio Workshop

Tonight is experimental night at the radio workshop, with two original plays, "Imprimus," and "Alkahest," to be presented by the actors. The program will be released over KOAC between 7:30 and 8:30.

"Imprimus," written by Mary Staton Krenk, is of surrealistic, impressionistic nature, depicting the conflict between emotion and reason in a woman's mind. Mrs. Krenk appears as guest artist in the production.

The drama is of poetic nature and combines a background of symphonic music with a chorus and unusual sound effects.

"Alkahest," from the pen of Marvin Krenk, instructor in speech, has a cynical thesis, dealing with the discovery of a searing acid which consumes the entire world.

Jerry Lakefish, prominent University theater player, has the lead as guest artist in Mr. Krenk's imaginative drama.

At Second Glance

(Continued from page two) Thetaki Larry Celci reveals why most Californians dance so-o-o-o slow: the sun-tan powder will wash off with perspiration if there's too much exercise . . . that if you're interested in just what the end of the world will sound like, we suggest tuning into KOAC tonight at 7:30 . . . that all those Webfoots who made dates for the blackout this Friday night will be a bit disappointed, for contrary to original opinions, the actual blackout time will last only fifteen or twenty minutes, not from 8 till 10. The latter is merely the time in which to expect the blackout . . . that the Sigma Chis are having quite a time trying to select their annual "sweetheart."

SHORT STORIETTE: Because not all ending to jokes are funny, as you've probably guessed by now, we offer the following, with five endings. Just choose your own:

The customer entered the cafe, sat down, and ordered his menu. When a bowl of tomato soup was placed before him, he called, "hey, waiter, there's a fly in my soup."

Just select your own answer from these:

1. Shhhh, not so loud; everyone will want one!
2. Yes, I know. We find drowning more merciful than the swatter.
3. Well, whatta expect for a dime, a humming bird?
4. That's all right; there's no extra charge.
5. Grab your fork. Maybe a trout will come to the surface!

learns wise way to buy fur coat

Be the first on your campus to wear the new Wrapover. Fashion in Hollander Mink-Blended Muskrat.

"I'm in favor of a required course in fur buying. I just happened to learn what to look for in furs! My old fur coat (the one that still makes 'em look twice) was getting a new lining and the furrier showed me the Hollander stamp on the back of the pelts—the reason my coat wore so well, kept its beauty longer."

AND WHEN YOU BUY NEW FURS your retailer will be glad to show you, on pelt or tag, this famous Hollander mark. The price of furs depends on quality of skins and workmanship, but whether you pay much or little, the Hollander stamp tells you your furs will keep their beauty longer.
