"Gotta cram for a mid-term," Sally said as she reluctantly dragged herself away from a coed bull-session. But her exam wasn't until two days later and she was sleepy so she carefully put up her hair, polished her fingernails with luscious red nail polish and got lots of beauty sleep.

Everyone said she looked like a dream the next day—fresh as a daisy, and she was so busy attending meetings, coke-dates, and doing other things, that she forgot all about the awful old mid-term until after dinner.

Finally, as the big-ben clock struck 9:30, Sally settled down on a soft davenport, with a carton of cokes, two packs of cigarettes, a box of Whitman's chocolates, a textbook and a couple of pages of pencil-written class notes by her side.

"What a night," Sally said the

Late Permission Halloween, Blackout Provide Dance Themes

By LOIS HULSER

Dear Diary—The dean has given us 1 o'clock permission for the Whiskerino Saturday night and Carolyn Holmes, campus social chairman tells us campus clothes, socks and saddles, will be just the thing. Ken Baker and his boys will play and we're dancing in the Igloo while we can. Campus males doing their first year as members of the sophomore class will be there next morning, as, after three hours of sleep, she crawled off the davenport, tied a kerchief around her fuzzy curls and finally got to her exam just as the bell rang. By this time she was so nervous and sleepy she had forgotten everything she studied.

No one told Sally that she looked nice that day; her coke dates were boring; and all day she worried about that horrible exam she had flunked. She decided that she would study her lessons from day to day.

That's what we've decided to do after every exam we've taken since we've been in school, but, oh woe, here we gotta go cram for another mid-term.

with two weeks growth of whiskers. A new Betty Coed and Joe College will be chosen. Betty Jane and Russ are getting a little old for that sort of thing now.

Law School Dance

The boys who dwell in Fenton are having their annual fall term social event at the Lane county fairgrounds Saturday eve. Originally the occasion was to welcome the dean home. When he didn't come home the lawyers decided a whiskerino would be just the thing but the sophomore class usurped the idea. By luck, Hallowe'en is this weekend so the law school is having a Hallowe'en dance this term.

Friday night we're playing the mayor's little game and it is suggested (by the dean) that we stay in until the blackout is over so the idea has generally been accepted. After it is over some time between 8 and 10, coeds will be off to house dances, shows, bowling, the Park, bridge games, etc.

Dugout Theme

Independents enter their term dance in John Straub via Sigma hall basement. Theme is a dugout and Bob McFadden is playing.

SAE's pledge dance will follow the blackout theme with Fred Beardsley's band playing.

Sigma Chis are solving the what-to-do-tonight problem by entertaining their dates at a radio dance.

Eddie Fitzpatrick, maestro of sweet swing, will play for tea dancing Sunday afternoon at the Park.

Pi Kaps are having a preference dinner Sunday.

A wedding of interest to University friends and townspeople was that of Miss Ann Brown and Ray Stewart, in Stevenson, Wn., October 18. The wedding was performed at noon. There were no attendants.

Several parties and showers were given Mrs. Stewart preceding her marriage. They are now at home in the Virginia court apartments on East Thirteenth street.

Dressing Data

Get rid of all those inhibitions when you go to the Whiskerino Saturday night—dress as rah-rah collegiate as possible. The louder the plaids, the sloppier the sweaters, and the dirtier the saddle shoes the better.

Ginghams, farmerettes and straw hats are the ticket if you've been called as a witness to the Saturday night law school barn dance.

Suit yourself on those private bowling or show dates—but if it's a double get-together with the other feminine party in advance the rather messy half-dress and half sports combination.
