Webfoots, Felines Scratch On Hayward Field Saturday

By WALLY HUNTER

When the Washington State Cougars and the University of Oregon Ducks clash on Hayward field it will be the age-old story of a team relegated to the cellar early in the season coming back in the home stretch to make it miserable for the giants of the league.

Oregon has choked on, but swallowed, two very bitter pills in the present campaign. The first was dished up by Stanford in the opening game of the season and the most bitter was served up UCLA style last Saturday. The Cougars have been covered with gutter garbage three times but in annihilating the flat tailed rodents from Corvallis last week they looked nothing but terrific.

WSC Stuff Given Ducks

The Webfoots have been drilling steadily this week on the new Hollingbery hipper-dipper, and from reports echoing from the confines of Hayward field Coach Gerald Oliver is far from satisfied. The Duck frosh have been working the WSC plays every night and are doing right well.

The double-barrelled offense of the Cougars is the biggest thing the Webfoots have to fear. Pass-crazy Billy Sewell is always present to lead the Cougar's deadly air game and newly found fullback Bob Kennedy leads the ground forces. To add to this several end around plays are built around Dale Gentry. There are slap-happy guents all over the Beaver campus at present who will tell you that they tried to mow down the mammoth end—but don't ask for details.

The physical conditions of the Oregon men has been a little on the rocky side since the Ukes got through—but everyone but tackle Ed Moshofsky is expected to be ready by game time.

If the guy that dishes out the weather for Eugene and vicinity can keep his hands off the rain switch for the next two days Hayward field should be in first class condition for the Saturday fray. Oregon has yet to play a home game that has been unspoiled by surly weather, and a dry field should aid the Webfoot cause. In sheer power the WSC lads seem to have the edge because of boomer boy Kennedy. On the other hand the plunging of both Bob Koch and Bill Dunlap has been above average in many instances and if the Webfoots are forced to blast for yardage, too much trouble shouldn't ensue.

Although not of the utmost importance (at present) one of the highlights of the game could be a punting duel between Duck Curt Mecham and Cougar Sewell. Mecham's punting has been tops on the coast all season, and two years ago Sewell was the leading punter on the coast. This fall Sewell's punts haven't broken any records for distance but if the safety ever gets his hands on them he is indeed a lucky man. The lithe Cougar has a tantalizing habit of dropping the ball out of bounds usually near the opposition's ten-yard marker. To blow over the prowess of Mecham is needless. He has an average of 41.4 per kick and half of the time the ball was as wet and heavy as an overripe squash.

Frosh Add Stevens Doughboys To Season's Gridiron Lineup

Another game was added to the Oregon Duckling schedule when Anse Cornell, UO athletic director, concluded negotiations with authorities at Fort Stevens for a ball game to be played in Astoria Saturday night.

Cornell was in Los Angeles last week with the varsity and Fort Stevens authorities telegraphed him, asking for a game this week. Upon his return to Eugene, Cornell met with the athletic board and consummated scheduling of the tilt.

Leave Friday

The Frosh will leave Eugene Friday noon, and return Sunday morning. During their two-day trip to Astoria, the Ducklings will stay at the barracks of Fort Stevens.

Also on tap Thursday for the freshmen was a bit of posing in full game attire for the benefit of photographers.

In a final tuneup before their game with the soldiers, the Frosh continued their offensive drilling. Heartening was the appearance of Bill Davis, number one fullback, in suit for the first time since the Washington game.

Both Stan Boyd and Lyman Glasgow have been absent from practice all week, nursing injured knees. It is still doubtful whether they will be able to get in Saturday's tussle.

Upon their arrival in Astoria, the Frosh will hold a light workout, to limber up before the evening game.

No information on the Fort Stevens outfit is available, but the lineup will undoubtedly be sprinkled with ex-high school and college stars, as are the many army clubs that are playing football this fall.

The yearlings will have a traveling squad of 35 players.

Independents, Thetas Triumph

Kappa Alpha Theta last night ran up the largest score of the day's competition in WAA volleyball while trouncing Alpha Xi Delta with a score of 46 to 16.

In an accompanying contest, coed Independents administered a terrific 40 to 14 beating to Alpha Omicron Pi.

Kappa Alpha Theta pushed into the lead early in their contest and once ahead, were never threatened by the Alpha Xi Delta team.

The lead in the Independent-AOPi contest see-sawed at the outset. Before very long, however, the Independents found the range and began knocking the ball into the oppositions' court with accuracy par excellence.
