

Hilltop Observers See Eagle's View of Blackout

(Emerald Reporters Al Larsen and Herb Penny viewed the blackout last night from Skinner's butte and College crest. The following article describes what they saw—on the hills and in town.)

"Well, it isn't a bad place," he said, and so they started to dance atop the College Crest reservoir to Hoky Carmichael's "Rockin' Chair" while lights all over Eugene and Lane county blacked out. Onlookers huddled in their raincoats to escape from the heavy mist and headed to their cars, saying, "Why don't we listen to someone describe it on the radio."

The lights went out first on the west side, then the east side, and then the city center. When the sirens sounded at 8:58 p.m., street lights blinked out and almost no lights could be seen. People counted and whispered. Last lights to go were the red, green, and yellow stop lights on Willamette street.

Draws Crowd

Earlier at the other end of town on Skinner's butte cars had streamed up the hill to unofficial estimates of from one to two thousand. Although most were greatly disappointed to have their air raid "called on account of rain" they showed a keen interest in the blackout proceedings.

Men, women, children, and babies were all drawn to the edge of the two buttes when the first long blast was given. Anticipation brought almost complete quiet.

Successful

From the wide picture that could be had from the buttes it was obvious that the blackout had been successful. During the last 10 minutes the only lights visible in Eugene proper were a few blue lights, those of officials, and one white light from the

Off With the Fuzz

Ken Baker and his orchestra will swing out at 9 p.m. At 11 Thayer and Barry Campbell, masters of ceremonies, will announce the whisker winner and the new "Joe College" and "Betty Coed." A prize will be awarded the whisker winner.

Five boys and five girls were chosen Thursday night as finalists in the Betty and Joe contest. Their names will remain a secret, however, until the dance, when they will be announced on ballots passed to each person who enters. Winners will be announced after the ballots are counted.

Carolyn Holmes, campus social chairman, has announced that "collegiate" clothing, the louder the better, will help carry out the schoolhouse theme. Class pants, skirts and sweaters, and saddles and socks will complete the "typical costume."

Special Permission

The dean of women has granted special 1 o'clock permission for University women tonight.

A second public dunking took place yesterday afternoon in front of the Side, under the supervision of Sheriff Jim Burness and his posse. Twelve beardless sophomores "ran the gauntlet."

Ex-Football Star Turns Cartoonist

Len Isberg, star halfback on the Oregon football team last year, will make his debut as a cartoonist in the Eugene Register-Guard Sunday. Isberg, who graduated last year, is now working in advertising.

The series of cartoons will be run under the head of "Ever Had the Urge," and will treat "candid" shots from life. The Register-Guard will be the only paper to carry the cartoons.

Last Oreganas To Sell Soon

Twenty-five students have not yet obtained their 1941 Oreganas, Emerson Page, business manager of this year's yearbook, announced yesterday. The books will be held for a short time only, Page declared, and will then be sold to those on the waiting list.

Those who have failed to get their Oreganas are Clarence Carter, Robert Christensen, Marjory Clear, Eileen Cooper, Arthur L. Dentler Jr., June Doyle, Adrienne Flurry, Armin Gropp, Burson Ireland, Harold Johnson, Betty Ann Lemon, Fred Lloyd, Betty McNiece, Molly Maison.

John Meany, Warren Moe, Kenneth Nehl, Jacob Risley Jr., Romona Roberts, Roland Rodman, Barbara Schmiedling, William Snell, Barbara Taylor, Homer Thomas, Robert Van Orden.

Bronze Plaque Gives Oregon Hall Real Name

By FRITZ GIESECKE

After 20 years of protesting, the college of social science has at least succeeded in getting the correct name placed on its building.

This week a bronze plaque bearing the name Oregon hall was placed over the building door to cover the old school of education carving in the stone.

Education School

The school of education prior to 1921 was housed in what is now Oregon hall. In 1921, a new education building was erected on the south campus and the old building was named Oregon hall.

But, for some unknown reason, a sign was never placed on the new college of social science structure.

Sign Asked For

For many years Dean James Gilbert and his staff asked for a sign. People looking for the school of education came to the Oregon building and were forced to trek the extra distance to the new building. This caused considerable confusion, yet it was not until 20 years later that the new building received its name—where everyone could see it.

Watch, Specs Held

A wrist watch and a pair of glasses have been turned in to the men's PE offices in the physical education building. Owner may have them by calling there.
