We think that almost all men and women have somewhat of a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde vein deep down inside. Witness the change that most people go through when they climb into the driver's seat of an automobile. People who usually are polite and even tempered seem automatically to be transformed into bad-mannered, ill-tempered beasts when they get a steering wheel in their hands.

Why? Traffic safety experts certainly would like to know. The transformation that comes over men and women when they wrap their fingers around a steering wheel would make an excellent study for a psychologist... the results would be interesting.

Anyway it's there and you don't have to go far for examples. Look around and if you're ashamed to admit you're one of these Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde drivers you undoubtedly know of several cases among your friends. Sometimes it seems as if the politer the person in daily life the more ill-mannered he becomes when seated behind his 80 horsepower.

Dave Swave, a University fellow, came from a good family and was known for his good manners and politeness. Whenever he opened a door he held it for a girl if one was coming through. He never let a door slam in anyone's face. When he bumped into someone he smiled and said "excuse me" and even when hurrying to class he respected the up against him in regular life.

But Dave had a car and when he climbed inside he lost all his polite, courteous ways. He became an automotive Mr. Hyde. Like most drivers he tried to steal the right of way every time he had a chance. He cut in front

Coed of the Week Blonde Bette Morfitt Prefers Blue Clothes

By RUTH JORDAN

A fondness for blue, especially in clothes, is characteristic of our coed of the week, Bette Morfitt. "I guess all blondes like blue," she smiled.

Her favorite perfume is "White Ginger From Hawaii," and although it is almost impossible to get it here, she prefers it to any other brand.

"I think all sports are interesting, but I like skiing best. That is one sport where you can have fun without being an expert," she remarked.

Cup Winner

Winner of the Gerlinger cup last year, Miss Morfitt has been a member of Kwama, sophomore women's honorary, and Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's honorary. She was chairman of the Junior Weekend luncheon last spring. This year she holds the offices of secretary-treasurer of the ASUO and treasurer of Mortar Board.

Regarding a black toy dog which she held on her lap, she said, "I have had him for eight years but I haven't named him yet. I guess I don't have a mania for naming things."

Plans Career

Activities are this blue-eyed Kappa Kappa Gamma's hobby. She is very interested in people, and plans to go into personnel work when she graduates this spring.

Selling in department stores and cashiering occupy most of Miss Morfitt's summers. "I like business work," she said, "particularly in large department stores."

The coed of the week does not like gaudy jewelry or hairbows. "I prefer pearls or very plain jewelry," she said smiling.

of other Mr. Hydies and impatiently pushed on the horn whenever something didn't suit him... all things that he could have been horrified to have chalked rights of other students.

So Speaks Social Head

By MARGE CURTIS

Perched atop the back of a chair, Oregon's petite campus social chairman, Carolyn Holmes, aired her views on AWS's forthcoming Coed Capers.

While puzzled coeds tear their hair and chew their respective fingernails in desperation of what to wear at the Capers, Carolyn, calm as usual, suggested the following concoctions:

"Since women are forever complaining about working their fingers to the bone and leading a dog's life, why not come as a bone?" she began.

Cute Costumes?

"If you don't like that idea, how about the diet angle?" she suggested. "Wouldn't the average coed look cute dressed as a grapefruit, an omelet, or a plate of lamb chops?"

"One can also talk sports and politics without the fear of being squelched by a knowing male," she added. (That should make lots of people happy.)

"This is strictly a women's party," said Carolyn emphatically. "Now that we have a chance to express our views, let's really 'let our hair down' and make the fellows realize 'that we can have fun without them.' (At least for one evening.)"

Shiver Me Timbers

Sister Act

Richard Hudnut has put out a prize package which is a real value. It is called Daily Duo and contains a full-sized tube of lipstick and a box of powder—both for the price of one (dollar). The lipstick colors are Carmeen, Regal Red, Crimson, Rose Cerise, Red Gold, and Bleck Cherry. The lipstick tube has a special catch so that when it is closed you can't twist it and jam the paste into the lid... smart, huh? It's at MILLER'S cosmetics bar.

Ski Lift

Or a lift to your skiing will be a new ski suit. Water-repellent gabardine ski togs... and zipped-in fleece lining in the jacket... detachable hood... two pockets in the jacket... Blue with red trim, green and, wine. At MONTGOMERY WARD'S for $9.98.

So You're Gonna Be Different

Well, here's your chance. Go to his house dance in a really startling formal. BEARD'S have just the thing. A dinner-dress with a white crepe jacket covered with glossy white fringe about two inches long... a round neck... short sleeves. The skirt is black crepe with tiny accordion pleats, which give the impression of the new straight, slender skirts. A red rayon jersey belt around the waist for a color highnote... $29.75.
