ISA Leaders Meet Tonight

Form Plans For Meeting

Plans, now rapidly taking form for the November 25 mass meeting of independent students, will reach completion when the heads of independent houses meet at 5 this afternoon in the Side to decide on the distribution of copies the Independent Students association constitution, and to work out a program for the meeting.

Wini Green, temporary secretary of previous meetings, has announced that the gathering will be for the purpose of familiarizing students with the movement's aims, and to open nominations for all students who may wish to run for an ISA office.

Organization

The association will be governed by an "executive committee and senate." Executive committeemen will be elected from each class and from the independent students of the campus at large. Living organizations will choose their own members of the senate, and the outside independents at a ratio of one representative to at least 20 outside non-Greeks.

Plans also call for an extensive card-index system for the listing of all independents and their chief interests, Steve Worth, independent leader revealed at a meeting Thursday night.

Aims

Aims of the association will be social orientation of freshman independents, participation of independents in extracurricular activities, and provision for the "political well being" of the students.

Social orientation of independent freshmen will be undertaken through a coordinated action by house social chairmen. The program will be conducted on what was described as "a long term project."

Independents New Order of 'O' Paddle Reigns Over Webfoots

Jim Rathbun, Order of the "O" leader, feeling that new students should know and old students should be reminded, has revealed a list of the traditions which students will be expected to observe during Homecoming week, November 24 through November 28.

Failure to conform to these rules, Rathbun said, will bring down upon violators the wrath of "O" men, who will be thicker than autumn leaves in their search for victims to feel the power of the new maple paddle which has been ordeerd to grace the occasion.

The traditions are:

1. No walking on the grass in the area between Kincaid street and University street, and Eleventh and Thirteenth.

2. Say hello to everyone met on "Hello Walk." This walk runs from Fenton hall past Deady to Villard.

3. Freshman girls must wear green ribbons in their hair. This is to be observed every day, and corresponds to the wearing of frosh pants by freshman boys.

4. Only seniors will be allowed to sit on the senior bench which faces the library behind Susan Campbell hall.

5. Freshmen must wear their tin pants.

6. No smoking on the old part of the campus. This is the area mentioned above.

7. Sophomores will wear either their moleskins or blue jeans.

8. Freshmen will wear rooters'

SHE CAPERS

University women will desert the men Monday when Coed Capers takes place. The annual affair is sponsored by AWS, headed by Elizabeth Steed, president. Approximately $200 of the proceeds will be converted into AWS scholarships. Highlight of the evening will be the judging of the best costumes, both for a house and for an individual, and of the most clever skit.

Babs Dupuy and Adele Canada: are co-chairmen of the affair which has not taken place on the campus since 1937. Women faculty members are also invited to attend the Monday evening party.

Sans Man

'For Women Only' Will Rule Monday

It'll be "A Woman's World" Monday night when University women gather at Gerlinger hall at 8 o'clock, sans male escorts, to take part in the Coed Capers, sponsored by Associated Women Students of Oregon. and as the dashed to the Monday night's festivities will mark the first Coed Capers since 1937, when the affair was called off, due to a flu epidemia on the campus.

Approximately $200 of the proceeds from the Capers will be converted into AWS scholarships, to be given to deserving Oregon women. The remainder will be added to the AWS treasury.

Skits, Apples

Co-chairmen Adele Canada and Babs Depuy promise, "food, friendship, and fun" for everybody, and urge all coeds to come and watch Marge Dibble and Barbara Hampson pick up stooges in the audience; to applaud class and faculty skits, and to eat candy, cokes, and carmel apples to their heart's content.

All women faculty members are invited to attend the Coed Capers to be held in Gerlinger hall Monday at 8 p.m.

Dancing will also be on the bill, with a large collection of popular records on hand, it was announced.

Costumes

A highlight of the evening will be the judging of the best costumes, both for a house and an individual, and of the most clever skit. Prizes will be awarded the winners of this competition.

"If the fellows attempt to crash the party," stated Miss Canada, "we have a large group of senior 'cops' prepared to oust them out. And," she added, "the campus cop, O. L. Rhinesmith, will be on hand to help them."

Shack Rats Gather

All Emerald reporters will meet at 2 p.m. today in the Emerald news room, according to Bob Frazier, news editor. Those unable to attend must be excused by Frazier before the meeting.

Bob Weston Named New

Bob Weston, sophomore in arts and letters, will lead Oregon rooters as new yell duke, Earle Russell, yell king, announced last night. Weston was one of seven competitors for the yell duke

"Those who tried out were all very good," Russell declared, "and it was very difficult to make the decision." The appointment was made by Russell and Max Miller, yell duke.

Happy

"I am very happy indeed to receive this honor," Weston remarked as he dashed to the men's dressing room between scenes of "Three-Cornered Moon," in which he is featured. "Earle Russell is the boss, and I'll do my utmost to please him and the students."

In tribute to Bud Steele, former yell duke ineligible because of grades, Weston said, "I will try to live up to the high standards of yell leading set by Steele."

From Cal

Yell Duke Weston is from El Monte, California, and attended the University of California in Berkeley, where he learned to lead yells under the Cal yell

Other contestants were Maury Salomon, Relf Case, Bob Sell, Tom Hazzard, Bill Osterloh, and Al Conyne.

NEIGHBORHOOD FOLKS

Students on the Neighborhood News program broadcast local news as part of their classroom work. Shown airing the news gathered by other members of the editing class are Mimi O'Donnell, Ted Harmon, Chuck Boice, and Mary Lois Dana. The program is broadcast over KOAC every Tuesday evening from 8 to 8:15 by the staff who also prepare the script. A new staff is appointed each term.

'Neighborly' Newsmen Air Weekly Program

One way to keep from writing a thesis in Dean Eric W. Allen's senior editing class is to be on the staff of Neighborhood News, a weekly broadcast handled by four members of the class. These students scan 130 Oregon newspapers each week for interesting feature articles which have not been picked up by the wire service for national publication.

The program is broadcast over KOAC every Tuesday evening from 8 to 8:15 by the staff who also prepare the script. Sometimes they present their material in "March of Time" fashion, sometimes in dramatizations or in straight conversation.

One Letter

To date the fall staff has had one fan mail postcard. However, Chuck Boice, Mary Lois Dana, Mimi O'Donnell, and Ted Harmon, the present research-writing-producing-acting group, find the work quite entertaining.

They followed the recent blackout from one town to another all over the state, finding much in the way of human interest material. They had lots of fun reporting the recent threat of Curry county to secede from Oregon to California. Fifth Year

Dean Allen and Marvin A. Krenk, instructor in speech, appoint a new staff each term. This is the fifth year that Neighborhood News has been in existence. The only changes this year have been a new theme song, "Louisiana Hayride," and the use of dramatization in presenting the program.

Morse to Hear Labor Dispute

University of Oregon's arbitrating law school dean, Wayne L. Morse, will leave Sunday for San Francisco where he will hold hearings on the longshore wage arbitration case at the request of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The dean returned from Washington, D.C., Tuesday after (Please turn to page eight)

Rain on the Walks

Rain tends to drift to lowly spots Where e'r I always do my walk-

And when it rains I wander home To tune of dripping shoe and stocking.

I'd wish one of the science laws Would just this once kick o'er its

Then may'be I'd find puddles that Accumulate in higher places.
