

UO Campus FBI School Trains Cops

It's getting harder and harder for a good criminal to make a living, according to Miss Mary C. Soranson, secretary of the bureau of municipal research, which is co-sponsoring a school on the Oregon campus for policemen from Oregon cities. Judge Lee Ackerman of Klamath Falls, president of the Oregon association of city police officers reports 54 men and 2 women registered so far.

Skipworth in Charge

Harold M. Skipworth, secretary of the association and member of the Eugene police department, is in charge of the program which includes lectures, labs, demonstrations and movies on latest developments of police technique. Head of the teaching staff is J. D. Swenson, FBI agent in charge of the Portland office.

Following a week of schooling the "students" will take exams. Secretary of State Earl Snell will present certificates at a banquet Saturday night. Police officers in uniform will receive free admission to the Homecoming game Saturday afternoon, which leaves the plainclothesmen in more or less of a dilemma.

Classes Listed

Other dignitaries and the classes they will conduct are as follows: Carl Donagh, U. S. attorney, Portland, the selective service act; Tom Judge, Klamath Falls police department, traffic investigation and regulations; Gerald Murray, Klamath Falls, juvenile delinquency; John K. Acton, chief of police, Astoria, relationships and military personnel; Walter Evans, Jr., assistant attorney general, Salem, searches, seizures and law of arrest, riots, and confessions; Stanley Church, director of traffic safety, Salem, traffic safety; Glen Kolkhorst, Coquille police department, interviews and report writing; Donald McCall, Portland police department, fingerprints; Clark Thomas, Ashland, and Louis Burgess, Salem, outdoor firearm training.

Erb Returns From Council On Defense

Dr. Donald M. Erb, University president, returned to the campus Thursday with some definite views on civilian defense, after the initial meeting of the national commission on colleges and civilian defense in Washington, D. C.

"I noticed a striking contrast between the attitudes of representatives of Atlantic seaboard institutions and those of representatives of Middle West and Western colleges and universities as to the extent of their civilian defense programs," President Erb said Tuesday.

He explained that representatives from the Atlantic seaboard were already prepared with extremely elaborate plans for civilian defense organization within their institutions. Many of them already had air raid precaution units in training, first aid classes, demolition squads in case of bombing raids, and other groups organized to deal with mass control of the academic community in case of air raid.

Dr. Erb, one of seventeen university and college presidents appointed to the committee by Fiorello H. LaGuardia, left the campus early in November and returned in time Thursday to celebrate Thanksgiving with his family.

On his way east he attended a meeting of the National Association of State Universities in Chicago and was guest at a New York alumni luncheon. In Washington he also conferred with Senator Charles L. McNary and Forrest Moulton, head of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The only other Pacific coast member of the commission was Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford.

Econ Discussions At YMCA House

First in a series of economics discussions will be held today at 4 p.m. in the YMCA house. H. C. Pentland, graduate assistant in economics, will lead the group.

Under discussion today will be economics of war. The meeting is open to all students taking principles of economics.

A summer wedding was that of Miss Margaret Strobel to Dr. Sherwood P. Burr, '35, M.D. '39.

Homecoming Cancels Afternoon Sessions

In accordance with long-standing custom, University classes will be dismissed Friday afternoon, November 28, to enable students to participate in Homecoming activities, it was announced from the office of personnel administration Tuesday.

Friday morning classes will be held as usual, although some members of the Homecoming committee may be excused from morning classes.

Sweater Drive Ends; Orides to Collect Today

Sweaters and scraps of yarn will be collected from campus living organizations this afternoon for Bundles for Britain, Jane Alice Pengra, chairman, announced last night.

Miss Pengra stated that representatives will solicit their house members for old sweaters, and Orides members will collect the bundles and deliver them to Mary Farr and Mary Huser, instructors in home economics, sponsors of the drive. After the sweaters have been reconditioned they will be turned over to the local Red Cross.

Latin Classes Present Thirteenth Century Play

The Latin classes under the direction of Mrs. Edna Landros of the classics department will present a translation of a Latin Christmas play of the 13th century tonight at 8:30 over KOAC.

The play, which the class itself translated, is part of a project carried on by various departments of the University.

Originally written for use in monasteries and churches of Europe, the play will have medieval music to supplement the text.

Adrian Martin of the drama department is helping to direct this Christmas play.

Show Rehearsal

Students Plan Dog Town Play

"The Story of Dog Town Common," an Irish poetic play, by Joseph Liss, is to be presented Thursday night from 7:30 to 8 from the University extension over KOAC. According to Marvin A. Krenk, instructor in speech, "It's definitely an experimental radio drama in that it's written in many parts in incomplete sentences and phrases suggesting mood or idea."

Members of the cast are Stephanie Peterson, the story teller; Mark Cooper, the young Irish sailor; Norma Baker, Molly; and Betty Hynson, Ma Hester. Others in the cast include Bob Bryant, Bob Mendt, Marjorie Hoffman, Elaine Voss, and Ted Harmon.

Chosen as background and transitional music are Alexander Borodin's "Second Symphony in B-minor," Claude Debussy's "La Mer" and Tchaikovsky's "Symphony Number Six."

"The Story of Dog Town Common" was presented by the Columbia Workshop over the Columbia network two years ago.
