

parade onto Hayward field will begin.

Alums will be feted tonight at dinners in campus living organizations.

Of special interest to the old students will be the exhibits now displayed in Johnson hall by the schools of business administration, education, science, physical education, and journalism, the library, and University administration.

Figures on yesterday's alumni registration were not available as complete tabulations have not yet been completed. Many alums went to downtown hotels without registering first in Johnson hall.

Miss Hughes, Oregon's first Homecoming hostess and chief "hello" girl, will be introduced at the Homecoming dance tonight. She was presented at the McArthur court rally and variety show last night and at a Eugene chamber of commerce luncheon yesterday noon when she and Hudson gave Coach Tex Oliver a lucky wishbone.

Returning Alums Find Weekend of Activities

It's a big weekend for Oregon's returning alums, with something doing every minute for the busy visitors. Heading the list of events, of course, is the annual Oregon-Oregon State classic in Hayward field at 2 p.m., while the Homecomers' second big "must" is the Homecoming dance in McArthur court at 9 tonight.

Today's leading alumni activity is the semi-annual meeting of the University of Oregon Alumni association at 10:30 a.m. in Johnson hall, the administration building. New officers will be elected and Dr. Donald M. Erb, University president, will report on the institution's progress.

Directors of the Alumni association will reconvene today at 9 a.m. in Johnson hall to continue their meeting at 2 p.m. yesterday. Alums will "get together" informally at the Eugene armory, Seventh and Oak, after the Duck-Beaver clash this afternoon.

The men's and women's living organizations registering the largest percentage of alums in relation to the number of members in the house will receive cups at the Homecoming dance tonight from Russ Hudson, Homecoming chairman. The cups will be awarded for one year.

Registration of alumni, which began at 2 p.m. yesterday, will continue today in Johnson hall. The visitors will be met at the noon train by members of Kwama, sophomore women's service honorary. Automobiles, three from each living organization, and buses will take the alums to Johnson.

Hope Hughes, Homecoming hostess; Lou Torgeson, ASUO president; Bette Morfitt, ASUO secretary; George "Porky" Andrews, Interfraternity council prexy; Janet Farnham, hospitality committee chairman, and the Homecoming hospitality committee will greet and welcome alumni in Johnson and will assist with registration.

Order of the "O" men will have a luncheon meeting today at noon. At 1:50 the lettermen's annual
