She Gave Him A Pipe... Ugh

smoking. A good meerscham should last a lifetime.

Increasingly popular in recent years is the cherry-wood pipe. Its sweet fragrance marks it as a pipe quite distinctive among its wooden brethren. The price is cheap, too; some of them sell for as little as a buck.

Price

Which brings us to the all-important question of price. You can get a pipe for two bits. You can get one for a dollar, and you can get beautifully matched sets for several hundred. As a rule, however, a pipe costing between $3 and $5 will be of a definitely superior variety. Moreover it is not always the highly advertised, well-known brands that make the big hit. A lesser known brand may contain better materials than some of the big-name products.

Now for a parting word about the stuff that goes into pipes. Most men smoke tobacco. Don't give the man of your choice tobacco, particularly not in large quantities, unless you know his brand.

Men are as finicky about their tobaccos as women are about their perfumes. Nothing but the right kind is ever quite right.

Christmas Plays Fill Radio Workshop Air

Two original plays, written by Jane Hooker and Ted Harmon, will be presented by the radio workshop this Thursday from the University extension studios over KOAC, from 7:30 to 8:30, revealed Marvin Krenk, instructor in speech.

"Father Forgive Them," by Jane Hooker, brings an old Bible story up to date, while "Four Were Walking," by Ted Harmon, is a largely poetic play, making use of many of the newer techniques for experimental drama. In this play, for the first time in the workshop history, the sound of a London air raid is being produced.

Both experimental dramas have a Christmas theme.
