Co-eds Crave Gadgets On Lists for Christmas

By MARY ANN CAMPBELL

For the exclusive purpose of brightening up your own life or someone else's, if you are in the throes of a burst of Christmas cheer, or, mundane though it is, to help you along your way down your Christmas list, here is a thought. The designers of compacts and such-like, as well as the people who think up evening bags, have had a sort of field day, and produced some amazing and yet extremely practical bits of gadgetry.

In the compact, cigarette case, or compact-and-case-in-one department you can find right here in Eugene, without looking very hard, too, an astonishing affair which consists of a cigarette case, a LARGE mirror, rouge, lipstick, powder, coin purse, and comb, and you could get your front door key in, too, if you try, all in one not especially oversized container. It's made so the tobacco crumbs are kept under control, too. It comes in gold, with a design or jewels on top.

Cigarettes Separate

If you prefer to have your cigarettes separated from your powder, you might take a look at a set made of silver, with little enameled flowers on it. The cigarette case is standard, and the compact is made in the shape of an eighteenth-century snuff box.

The Lipvue mirror is a little round mirror on a small black handle. On one side of the mirror you see the daylight effect on your face; on the other, what you resemble after dark. The handle has a lipstick in it, and a place for powder. Yes, it IS amazing, isn't it? Oh, yes, it has a little cloth bag for a container.

Tailored Goods

On the more tailored side, saddle leather compacts and cases are elegant, efficient looking, and would be wonderful to carry with your tweeds. Also the new Lucite cigarette cases, which are transparent, amazingly light, and, according to legend, very durable, besides having the advantage of being capable of holding a whole pack of cigarettes at one time.

One of the more charming of the new evening bags is made of strips of curled velvet arranged in rows, to look like feathers. Its companions are of velvet, not made to look like feathers, but all decorated up with sequins or gold roses.

If you get one with sequins, you also receive a sequin spangle to wear in your hair; if you acquire the roses, gold roses for the hair accompany it. Also, lame bags, sizable and inexpensive for lame, come in either white and gold effects, or pastel combinations shot through with gold thread.

cents. Many students can obtain them from their parents.

First aid training, treatment of burns, fire control and rescue work were discussed at the council meeting. It is proposed that the University offer training in general first aid and make the courses available to all students.

Further action on first aid measures will be carried on next term.

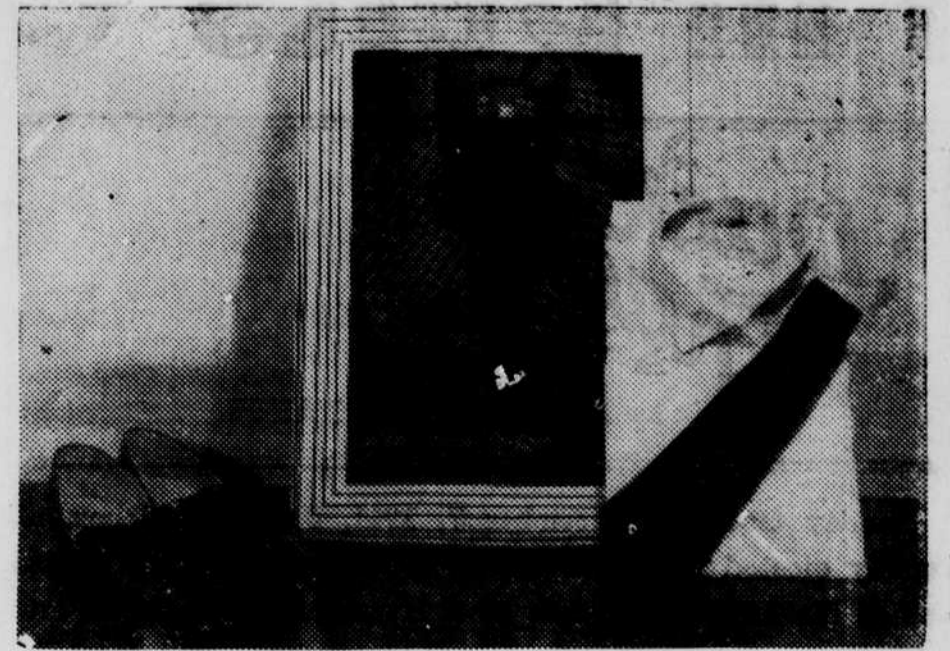

Fire Drills

The council discussed fire prevention, evacuation of certain hazardous buildings and fire were discussed and plans made for drills both in campus buildings and in living organizations.

Available air raid shelters were investigated and there was some talk about the heating tunnels and their use in case of raids. Further investigation is necessary before they can be definitely decided upon.

A bureau of central information was planned. This would contact living organizations in case of blackout deadlines and keep files of casualty lists and general information for the campus.

The Christmas Bazaar of the architecture and allied arts school has been called off, it was announced by Woody Ichihashi, president of the Architecture and Allied Arts league.

In spite of the many gadgets that will undoubtedly be given for Christmas presents, high on the list of packages under the tree will be clothing. Always practical, it also probably is appreciated more than any other present. The clothes shown above are from DeNeffe's.

Blackout Laws Asked

Oregon cities are requesting sample blackout ordinances from the bureau of municipal research, according to Mary C. Soranson, secretary. Cascade Locks, Medford, and Newport have sent inquiries and more are expected immediately.

Japanese Cash

Southern Pacific Lines reports that no Japanese will be allowed to ride on trains and busses anywhere in the United States unless he can show his birth certificate or other document proving his citizenship.

Only after they have proved they are native born or naturalized American citizens will Japanese be allowed to draw money from the banks of the country or move from their present location. Japanese aliens, of which there is only one on the campus, are in imminent danger of apprehension by police or federal agents.

Mr. Constance pointed out Wednesday that Japanese students were having trouble proving their citizenship since they cannot open their safety deposit boxes to get their birth certificates. Japanese-Americans are obviously going to have a harder time as they are more conspicuous than a European enemy would be, he said.
