

A Solution for Drives?

cent of the men and 93.33 per cent of the women voted that they preferred contributing at the dance hall door.

BESIDES evening affairs, there was definite interest last term in the afternoon rally dances sponsored by Kwama and Skull and Dagger. Usually 10-cent affairs with no thought of making a profit, students would certainly not object to raising the ante to 15 cents with the other nickel headed for Uncle Sam's budget.

There are some students who take the melodramatic attitude that we should forego "fun" with a war waging. Yet, the army itself probably would laugh at this and label it foolish if carried too far. Civilians are not being asked to give up an evening of dancing when it does not interfere with war work.

Opponents to the contribute-as-one plan question that even though the reserve fund is built up and there is usually a quota set, won't an individual be asked to give anyway under the economic axiom of "charge what the traffic will bear?"

WHAT about the psychological effect? Will students under this painless method of donating feel they are "doing their bit" through dances as much as being hit individually?

And won't there be a big percentage of students untouched by contributing this way? Girls, except at afternoon rally dances, seldom "go dutch" and many students do not dance.

Contributing-as-one probably would not be 100 per cent fool-proof, but on the other hand, with money going to a central committee, there would be less people handling money and a definite and experienced organization to make the drive a success.

At least it's an idea for the student defense committee to look over.—B.J.B.

OSC Dean of Women Will Address AWS

"What Is a College Girl Made Of" will be the topic of a talk by Mrs. Beulah Maris, new dean of women at Oregon State, at 207 Chapman Thursday at 4.

According to Elizabeth Stead, AWS president, Mrs. Maris is one of the most interesting speakers ever to be heard by an AWS group, and is brought to the Oregon campus by popular request. She is going to bring her seven members of the Oregon State AWS cabinet with her.

A dinner will be given at the Gamma Phi Beta house Thursday evening at which Mrs. Maris, Dean Hazel P. Schwering, Mrs. Alice B. Macduff, and the Oregon and Oregon State AWS cabinets will be honor guests.

Staff members of the Daily Texan say that if England has to wait until there are "bluebirds over the white cliffs of Dover," for "love and laughter peace ever after," they may have a long time coming—"just you wait and see."

Because, according to Dallas ornithologists, the bluebird is a native of North America and as far as is known has never seen the white cliffs of Dover.

The composer of the popular song by the same name undoubtedly used considerable poetic license, authorities believe.

The Texan says that according to Nelson's encyclopedia, the robin redbreast is the "nearest approach" Britain has to the American bluebird.

The scene is a library in a USO club house at an army post. Soldier: I'd like to check out a book.

Librarian: We just received a shipment from Iowa state college. Anything special you want?

Soldier: Do you have "Berlin Diary."

Librarian: No, but we have "The Decisive Hour in Christian Missions." I understand that's pretty good.

Soldier: Any pictures in it?

Librarian: No, but here's one with lots of pictures. "Brief Analytic Geometry." Look at those drawings!

Soldier: Pretty, aren't they; but don't you have "For Whom the Bell Tolls?"

Librarian: You mustn't read stuff like that. Here—try "The Boy Ranchers on the Trail."

Soldier: I read it 15 years ago.

Librarian: Then read it again. Don't be so fussy.

Soldier: I sort of had my mind set on something modern.

Librarian: Why don't you read "Fundamentals of Metaphysics?"

Soldier: Any conversation in it?

Librarian: No, but the type is easy to read. Look here.

Soldiers: What do those letters mean?

Librarian: They're formulas.

Soldier: I don't like it.

Librarian: I'm going to pick out a book and you'll take it and like it. Do you want me to call the sergeant?

Soldier: No, no! I'll read it. I'll read anything. Anything. Just pick one out at random.

(The librarian hands him a book. He rushes outside with it, goes over to his quarters and sits down on the edge of his bunk to read. Then he looks at the title of the book. It is "The Horrors of Modern Warfare.")—Barometer.

"Hello, who is this speaking?"

"Watt."

"What?"

"Yes, Watt's my name."

"What?"

"My name's John Watt."

"John What?"

"Yes, you're right; are you Mr. Jones?"

"No, I'm Knott."

"Listen, will you tell me your name?"

"I'm Knott."

"Who are you?"

"Will Knott."

"Why not?"

"No, not Why Knott, Will Knott."

And so on, ad infinitum.

Awful Truths

Mickey Mitchell, DeeGee, still dates in the Beta house, but now it's with Kent "Harpo" Jackson.

Dates and more dates: Janet Straubel, Theta, and Lou Torgeson, Beta—Joan Maxwell, Pi Phi and Bill Hopper, Phi Delt—Jim Burness, Fiji, and his date wearing identical ski sweaters while coke dating.

Scene at the Senior ball—Phyllis (or was it Louise) of the Theta's Gordon twins dancing with "Slim" Wintermute, Phi Delt—Jean Baker, Alpha Phi, with Cullen Murphy, Chi Psi, and, of course, we could mention more names, but so many people never arrived.

And about those who didn't make the dance: law students Walker Treece and Bill Bernard thought they had better study that night, but Saturday afternoon they thought of an even better idea and so they staged it 'round town instead. And, of course, some of the Betas boycotted it in favor of the Miami Triad coming up next weekend.

Another couple seen together a lot—Connie Walbridge, Alphi, and "Tiger" Payne, Sigma Nu, (of course, you remember him).

And now we know why Jack Turpin's mad—he dates Pat Carboe, Chi O, for the Triad and she proceeds to take a Delt pin from Dave Hart just a week before the big affair.

It's—almost spring term now and the ATO's thoughts have turned to thoughts of pin-hanging, newly initiated Walt Long hangs his Maltese Cross on Carol Johnson, DeeGee pledge. And speaking of DGs and Tau brothers, Mona MacCauley can hardly wait until Ox Wilson gets his. Can you guess why?

Down for week-enders—Jane Doyle, Kappa, Jean Talbot, DeeGee, and Phyllis Dube, Pi Phi.

Very few of you will be able to remember back in the good old days when the word around the Sigma Chi house was "hell, how he hates himself Handsome Harry Hanifan."

For the remainder of winter term The Co-op will close at noon on Saturdays
