Food Decision Expected Soon

Peaceful settlement of the dormitory food controversy seemed in the offing yesterday when members of the dormitory food committee, chosen by dorm residents after conferences with University President Donald M. Erb regarding their complaints, met with dormitory officials to formulate an eight-fold program.

Committee members and Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, director of dormitories, and Miss Helen Goodenow, dorm dietician, agreed on staggered eating schedules for the various living units, the serving of morning coffee until 8:15 a.m., student conservation of butter and lettuce, a different brand of tomato juice, a heavier Thursday lunch, the elimination of Harvard beets, prune whip, and sweet pickles from the diet list, the serving of vegetables and seconds in vegetable bowls, and the recommendation of a new meat loaf recipe to the cooks.

Cold Food

Student complaints of cold food, especially cold meat, prompted the plan to stagger the eating times of the various living groups so that smaller amounts may be cooked and served at one time and the food will be warm when it reaches the dining rooms.

Councils Synchronize Campus Defense Drive

By JACK BILLINGS and JOHN MATHEWS

Coordination of the faculty defense council and the student defense council has now been completed, according to chairmen of the respective organizations, and work is being pushed on campus preparation and protection.

A breakdown shows the "supreme war board" to be the University defense council, composed of faculty and student committees. Chief executive is Dr. Earl M. Pallett, campus air raid warden who is directly responsible to the Lane county defense council.

Student Head Fills Positions

Personnel of the recently established student defense committee was revealed last night by Lou Torgeson, temporary chairman. The committee, created to direct student war effort, operates in three divisions—personnel, publicity, and funds—under the chairmanship of ASUO President Lou Torgeson.

Divisions

Divisions are: Personnel and organization—Steve Worth, Ann Reynolds, and Marge Dibble; Publicity—Ray Schrick, John Mathews, and Don Jones; Funds and accounting—Russ Hudson, Nancy Riesch, and Marge Dibble.

Personnel workers will be in personal charge of all student defense projects, such as bond drives, Red Cross work, and air raid protection, while funds workers will raise money necessary for the projects and do accounting for the committee.

Temporary Head

Chairman of the committee was to have been Marty Schedler, who resigned on account of a heavy study burden, leaving Torgeson as temporary head. No names have been mentioned as yet to fill the vacated position.

First committee action was the recent defense bond drive, pronounced by its administrators a highly satisfying success. At the present time the committee is putting final touches on the organization of a Red Cross center for the campus. The Gerlinger hall location will save women defense volunteers a trip downtown every time they wish to put in time making emergency kits, knitting sweaters and socks, and working on similar war relief materials.

Congressmen Receive No Aid From UO Head

Unfortunately Dr. Donald M. Erb will not be able to help the poor congressmen. The card he received Thursday asking aid for congress was nullified by a notice published in evening papers that the campaign was stopped.

The card sent by the Spokane athletic round table said, "Congress needs HELP! They voted themselves a pension but that ain't enough. Don't worry about the war and taxes; get that pension—forget the axis."

The postcard was part of the club's campaign, which netted a truck load of goods such as straw hats, glass eyes, wooden legs, crutches, and moth balls.

Now in favor of buying bonds with money previously designated for delivering the goods, the club announced cessation of collections. The official statement came from the club's blond secretaries, Gloria Mundi, Victoria Cross, and Pearl Harbor.

So the moth hole President Erb might have contributed to help keep congress laughing will never reach the seat of democracy.

Money Unclaimed

Mrs. Mabel Houcks, secretary of the art school, still has the money found there last week.

The owner may have it by calling at her office.

Taylor Leads Faculty Group

(See Diagram Page 8)

On the faculty side, Dr. Howard R. Taylor, head of the psychology department is titular head of the faculty defense council. Independent of this group is Dr. Luther S. Cressman's air raid observation post, manned by student volunteers, which reports to the Eugene filter center. Answerable to the FDC and Dr. Pallett are the five defense committed heads. Directly under Dr. Pallett are the assistant air raid wardens, of which there are two for each of the eight campus districts.

Committee Heads

The five committee heads are: Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel administration, whose job it will be, as personnel manager, to supply students to fill out the skeleton faculty crews in each division.

J. O. Lindstrom, business manager of the University, is in charge of the protection and necessities division. Under Mr. Lindstrom will come the responsibility for police and fire protection, debris clearance, rescue work, food, clothing, housing, emergency shelters, aircraft observers in cooperation with Dr. Cressman, and museum protection.

Responsibilities

Dr. Will V. Norris, professor of physics, will shoulder the responsibilities of the communication and utilities division. His work will cover telephone and telegraph communication as well as radio and other signalling apparatus, transportation, electricity, water, steam, gas, fuel, and sanitation.

Dr. R. W. Leighton, dean of the school of physical education, will handle the medical disaster unit, which will have charge of Each will be an interview with one of the five men appointed by Executive Secretary Earl M. Pallett to act as "information centers" on these branches of the service.)

Students whose induction into the army may be expected soon and whose shoes are worn from trekking to their local draft boards may obtain helpful information concerning reserve branches of the nation's army, navy, and marine corps.

Dean R. W. Leighton of the physical education school and campus adviser for students interested in enlisting in the marines was the first of five faculty men to be contacted concerning the branches of the service which they represent.

Col. R. M. Lyon, head of the military science department, is
