

Hair Brevity . . . Women Save Time With Simple Methods

By EDITH NEWTON

All out for defense is the University woman's motto this spring, and hair goes with it. With defense work taking every spare minute, hair has become something to be reckoned with in the shortest possible time, but beauty has not been sacrificed for the need of time.

Short, simple, and smart is the 1942 hair style theme. Intricate styles that must be combed every few minutes and take hours to arrange are definitely of the past. In their place Oregon coeds have adopted combable styles that look natural and becoming to young girls.

A variety of styles are possible with the basic three or four inch wave that is gaining popularity.

One of the best looking of these short waves is Adele Canada's short curl.

Pigtails

Pigtails are losing popularity but are still seen occasionally tempting the boys to pull the ribboned braids. French braids are fast passing from the campus picture and leaving Chinese bangs as the chief foreign influence.

At the other extreme, long soft waves are popular, but in-between lengths are out of the latest trends. The longer styles take a minimum of time, too, since curls are loose and can be easily combed.

The titian tresses of Helen Angell are one of the best illustrations of this style.

Hats

Hats to perch on the newest styles this spring are mostly small and of vivid colors that draw attention to the hair and leave a lot of it to be seen. This makes it more important than ever for coeds' tresses to be looking just right at all times.

Spring's arrival brings sunshine and hair loose in the wind which means Oregon lasses must start early on their campaign to keep their hair in good condition. Of course, the good old idea of keeping it as clean as possible with frequent shampoos still goes.

Hair Care

Much is heard about which shampoo is best for most hair, but when it is all boiled down to what is really good for the hair and contains no impurities, plain castel soap seems to be in the front row.

Frequent brushings are still a cardinal law for girls who have any intentions of turning the masculine head, and in general it is a good plan to brush shining locks at least once a day thoroughly, oftener if possible.

For dry hair there are several special oils on the market that will do wonders to make locks softer and easier to keep in their place. Care of dry hair is especially important in the summer when dry winds and sunshine make it even drier, so start now to keep 'em shining.

Someone should get up enough courage to wear a bright yellow and purple silk jersey date dress. Some brave blonde could really create a sensation.

... is the pastel-shaded angora sweater and skirt from Miller's worn by Ann Whitman. The skirt is a novelty fashion featuring the self-pressing pleats. At night time skirt is folded in pleated lines—next morning swish—no trip to the ironing board but an unwrinkled skirt.
