Maybe you would rather try an xpedition to Archangel, the northern port of the Soviets. If your ship is lucky enough to get out of Newport News without beng torpedoed, it first faces the North Atlantic, with the U-boats challenging the Lebensraum of the sharks. Arriving at Iceland, you meet not only a lot of homesick Yankees, but the disturbing possibility that from then on in you may encounter the German battle fleet, consisting of a number of ships which recently es-caped to Kiel right under British noses. As you round Norway you skim German-held territory, pass Finland, which is at war with Britain, and if you reach Archangel with nothing worse than a nervous collapse you are fortunate.

Texas Sends Rare Pottery The museum of natural history acquired a collection of pottery fragments from various parts of Texas given to the University by the University of Texas, last week. This collection was acquired through the efforts of Mr. A. D. Krieger.

The fragments represent pottery types from east Texas artificial mounds and Burnt Rock Middens of central Texas. The design elements are largely incised and punctate. The shapes are hollow bowls and long necked jars.

These pieces represent one section of the gradually accumulating collection of aboriginal Indian pottery types from all parts of the United States. Other parts of the general pottery collection include representative pottery types from Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, and Mexico. They include the old Pueblo and Basket maker types as well as Hohokam and Mogollom.

New Extension Classes Open

The general extension division has opened two new extension classes to all Eugene citizens during the spring term. A class in home nursing, which is part of the University curricula, is now open to all townspeople because of the importance it might assume in case of air raids. Hours for this class include a lecture from 1 to 2 p.m. each Tuesday and one laboratory class from 1 to 3 p.m. Thursday.

Miss Lulu Geil, former superintendent of health service nurses, will teach this class. The class will carry two hours credit and can be used towards a Red Cross home nursing certificate if desired. Those interested should meet in room 116 in the Physical Education building.

The other new extension class is elementary tailoring which will be taught by Mrs. Mary S. Huser, instructor in home economics at the University. It will meet in 302 Chapman building on the campus each Wednesday night from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. A non-credit class, it includes lecturing and practical application. of the construction of both suits and coats.

Persons who wish to join these classes should register at the extension division on the campus before Tuesday.

Marine, Ex-Student, Wants Mail Courses

A former University of Oregon student, John Robert Hall, of Portland, now stationed at the marine corps base in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, has requested the correspondence department to send two courses by airmail to his base. These courses are in elementary news writing and American history.

Hall, in order to be eligible for officer's training, has to have a Bachelor of Science degree, and although he has completed four years of work here, he does not have the necessary credits for the degree. He desires to complete his curriculum through the correspondence department, which is maintained by the general extension division of the state system of higher education.

O.J. Hollis Back from Coast Athletic Meet

Orlando J. Hollis, professor of law, has returned from the Pacific coast intercollegiate athletic conference held in Portland during the first of the week. He attended in the capacity of faculty athletic representative from the University of Oregon.

Originally scheduled for December 8, the winter conference was postponed till March due to war circumstances. Among business transacted during the conference was the re-appointing of Edwin N. Atherton as commissioner for 1943. It was also decided that any member institutions represented at the conference would be allowed to issue up to 3,000 free admissions, to athletic contests to members of the armed forces.

Representatives from ten institutions, including Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho and Montana, were present at the meetings.

Intercollegiate athletic competition has been abandoned by Bard college.
