'Mouthpieces' Offer Assistance

The ever-helpful men of the law school came through again Wednesday when they offered their services to the Junior Weekend committee. The law-men offered to form a bucket brigade to fill up the mill race in order to provide for a canoe fete.

Constance Predicts Rise in Honor Lists

The number of students who made the winter term honor roll is much larger than fall term, C. L. Constance, assistant registrar, said Wednesday. The roll will be ready for publication in Friday's Emerald.

Constance expressed surprise that so many achieved scholastic honors during a term as upset as last term and that many received honor roll grades for the first time in their college careers.

The house GPA list will be compiled and published early next week.

War Hits Rushee . . .

Women Veto Rush Week

At a Panhellenic meeting Tuesday, it was decided to dispense with the special rush week usually held spring term, as was also decided by the inter-fraternity council earlier.

According to Margaret Ann Jackson, Panhellenic president, houses will do their own individual rushing. They may invite prospects down for the weekend, or make other plans for their entertainment.

Previously, all houses held a joint rush weekend or rush week every spring term, but due to the war situation, it has been discontinued. Rushees were usually invited down on weekends such as Junior Weekend.

Action taken by the inter-fraternity council this week also dispensed with their usual spring rush-week. As in Panhellenic, however, they will invite prospects down for rushing by individual houses.

McKinney Sets Sing Deadline

Today is the deadline for registration of entries for the all-campus sing scheduled for April 25.

"All entrants must file applications in the educational activities office not later than 5 p.m.," said Bob McKinney, chairman. Application data must include: name of living organization, name of song leader, and the number of persons in the chorus. Choruses are limited to a maximum of 24 members. Only one song may be sung by each group.

McKinney and his committee plan the sing as a concert. Decorations will include potted palms and customary concert props.

Music notables from all over the country have been asked to judge the contest, McKinney said.

All to Be There

This all-campus sing will furnish the University one event in which all living organizations will be working together, the committee claims. Besides the one individual number to be presented by each group, the assembled choruses will sing one finale selection en masse.

Other members of McKinney's committee are: Stan Weber, Janet Farnam, Bunny Potts, Barbara Younger, Marjorie Major, and Bob Ballard.

Pore Greeks

The fraternities won't have a rush week, and you ought to see them pout. As they vision the beautiful dinners they now will do without.

Famed Italian Singer Likes American Girls

'Met' Star Presents Tailor's Problem

By MARJORIE MAJOR

The golden-voiced Italian, Nino Martini, believes that American girls are "superb dancers, ambitious, and pretty"—but he won't commit himself on the question of how they compare with European girls.

"If I had my choice of answering that question or facing a firing squad, I believe I would get myself a bullet-proof vest and take my chances," he says.

"The European girl is rather more sophisticated, and is incidentally a better cook because she stays home more," he contends. Further than that, it would take the wisdom of Solomon and the wit of Alexander to make a judgment and Martini declines to stick his neck out.

Best-Dressed Star

Students will have a chance to judge on his title of best-dressed opera star when he sings in concert here Tuesday, April 7, as the third artist on the Greater Artist series.

A problem in tailoring arises as a result of Martini's tremendous chest expansion. A tenor who can sing F above high C in full voice requires plenty of chest development, and Martini, the only tenor who can hit that

Class Cards Needed

All juniors who are working or expect to work on Junior Weekend must buy class cards or they will be ineligible for jobs, Pat Cloud, junior class president, said Wednesday. Sale of class cards closes today.

Queen Candidates Promised Fair Vote In Coming Election

Democratic processes will be used in the selection of the Junior Weekend Queen who is to be nominated next week, Bud Vandeneynde, chairman of the queen's reign committee, announced Wednesday.

All women's living organizations should nominate and turn in their choices by next Thursday noon, April 19, to Vandeneynde.

The Junior Weekend committee, according to Vandeneynde, is working on plans to present to the campus at large a politically clean selection method to obtain a queen to rule the annual junior celebration. It will be impossible for any political group to circumvent this plan, he declared.

This step is being taken, Pat Cloud, president of the junior class, stated, because, although the Weekend is sponsored by the junior class, the committee believes that the queen selection should be made from an all-campus view.

Requirements for queen are: completion of 93 term hours, a cumulative GPA of two point, and a GPA last term of two point.

The queen will be chosen for beauty, queenliness, and campus popularity, Vandeneynde said. He emphasized that organizations should investigate the candidates' scholastic standing before submitting nominations.

Staff to Talk To Students On Marriage

In answer to student requests for individual conferences, eight advisers and University faculty members have consented to meet with students to discuss love and marriage problems which are too specific to be handled in groups. According to Janet Morris, general chairman of the love and marriage committee, any student desiring helpful discussion with an older person may consult one of these advisers. In this way the committee hopes to make available more specific information to students.

Book Reference

Students will find the book, "Plan for Marriage," by Folsom, a further aid before consulting an adviser.

Advisers have set the times at which they may be contacted. The advisers and their hours are:

Mrs. Elizabeth DeCou, 10-12 a.m. and 2-4 p.m. daily at the YWCA.

Mrs. Mary Farr, 2-5 Tuesday and Thursday.

Dean Karl Onthank, 8-12 a.m. and 1-5 p.m. daily except for classes and other appointments.

Dr. Robert Leeper, during office hours or otherwise, if arranged.
