

Commonwealth Talks Open

The annual Commonwealth conference which is to be held on the University campus April 16 to 17 has secured as guest speaker, Dr. George S. Wehwein, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin and national authority on land uses, Dr. E. H. Moore, professor of sociology and chairman of the conference arrangements, declared yesterday.

The discussion this year, the 20th annual conference of the group, will center around problems of the rural-urban fringe which for many cities and communities in the state is now particularly important because of increasing population due to defense projects, army contentments, and war industries. Dr. Wehwein has been scheduled for two talks, one on land uses and the other on zoning and other public controls of the rural-urban fringe.

Survey

Lloyd M. Faust, assistant professor of business administration at the University has made a statistical study of the Eugene fringe area and will make a comprehensive report on his findings to the conference. The study will serve as a basis for round table discussion for the members.

Other speakers present will include Dr. Vernon Douglas, Marion county health officer, Salem; Orval Etter, bureau of municipal research at the University; Harry D. Freeman, city planning commission, Portland; Glen Jackson, Jackson county chamber of commerce, Medford; and Dean James H. Gilbert and Professor C. L. Huffaker, of the University faculty. They will all discuss finance, schools, public utilities, health and sanitation and zoning.

Extension Catalog Now Available to ASUO

The catalog for correspondence courses was released by the extension division Tuesday. The courses offered may be counted for degree work or for graduation.

The catalog is offered to students without cost. The extension division is encouraging students to arrange for the courses before they leave school, although they need not register for them until later.

Among the courses are many which will be valuable to men who are planning to enter the service.

Anthropology Museum Adds New Specimens

Persons who have visited the museum of natural history will be pleased to know that a piece of "Old Smiley's" bath is now a part of the collections in the museum. "Old Smiley" is the pet name for the saber tooth tiger skeleton, smilodon californicus, from the La Brea tar pits in Los Angeles. The tar pits have been the fatal bath of many extinct species of animals.

Also added to the collection is a piece of mica schist from Fern Ridge dam. This mineral is sometimes known as "fool's gold." Early explorers, in Nova Scotia loaded their ship down with this mineral thinking it to be real gold. Mica schist is a rather rare mineral. Another "fool's gold," iron pyrites, is more common.

Graduate Students Plan Saturday Picnic

An outing is planned for the University graduate students for Saturday afternoon. Most of the graduate students have been notified by mail. The group will assemble at Gerlinger at 2 p.m., April 18, with bicycles if possible.

This outing is a continuation of a series of recreational programs for graduate students. Clare Pentland and Randall Aldrich, graduates in economics, and Munroe Shelley, graduate in psychology, are arranging preparations.

The meeting will be held inside in case of rain.

Eight Appointed To Faculty Senate In Liberal Arts College

Faculty of the new college of liberal arts met Friday. Result: the appointment of eight representatives to the faculty senate.

Chosen were James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of liberal arts; Dr. C. V. Boyer, dean of the college of arts and letters; Dr. R. P. Bowen, head of the Romance languages department; E. H. Moore, acting head of the sociology department; Andrew Mour-sund, head of the mathematics department; E. C. A. Lesch, associate professor of English; H. G. Townsend, head of the philosophy department; and John T. Ganoe, associate professor of history.

The liberal arts faculty voted that a committee should be appointed to investigate the problems of teacher training and degrees in the new college.

Dorm Reaches Food Decisions

Dorm students and the administration came closer to their settlement of the problems that have faced them concerning food when they met last week to discuss problems of the past week.

Raisin pie was definitely eliminated from the dorm diet, it was agreed by all the students and Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, dormitory director, and Miss Helen Goodenow, dormitory dietitian.

No Soup

The group decided that during the warmer weather of spring term it is advisable to substitute something else for the soup which has been served regularly in the past.

The food committee elected Dick Bennett, sophomore in business administration, chairman of the group. Edith Davis, freshman in arts and letters, was chosen to serve as secretary of all future meetings of the committee.

Milk Bottles

The situation concerning milk bottles not returned to the kitchen was discussed and all dorm residents are being asked to return milk bottles promptly to cut down on the extra expense caused by lost bottles.

Also present at the meeting to represent their halls were Jack Harris, junior in arts and letters, George Pederson, freshman in social science, Jim Watson, freshman in science, Dorothy Larson, freshman in architecture and allied arts, and Bob Simmons, freshman in social science.

Science Group Names Conference Delegates

Delegates to the annual north-west students science conference will meet at Corvallis, April 25. Monroe Shelley, chairman of the local students science group, announced that Randall Caswell, James Watson, Borys Melkine, and Armin Gropp have been elected to represent the 355 science majors at the University.

The convention is held in conjunction with that of the Oregon section of American physics teachers of which Dr. W. V. Norris of the University physics department is president.

A prize given annually to the best student paper read at the student conference will be presented by the teachers' committee.
