

Beavers Bump Ducks In 4th Annual Relays

Frosh, Rooks Battle to Tie

By BILL STRATTON

For the fourth consecutive year Grant Swan's Oregon State cindermen defeated Colonel Bill Hayward's Ducks in the annual relays, 5 to 3, giving the Beavers eight wins to Oregon's seven. There was a 4 to 4 tie in 1934. The Ducklings split with the Rooks, 2 to 2, both sacrificing the three-mile relay.

One reason for the Webfoot defeat was the shortage of men. The Ducks had to forfeit the two-mile and four-mile relays because of lack of distance runners, and Bob Newland competed against four Aggies in the high jump.

The only threat to any meet record was in the high jump. The four Beaver jumpers totaled 23 feet 7 inches and the meet record was just one inch higher. They explained that if they had known the record while they were competing, they would have pushed Mandic the extra inch.

While Oregon was short of men in the distance and high jump events, the Beavers suffered in the shot put. Oregon State had only one man to compete against the four-man team of Elliot, Shepard, Foster, and Regner.

The Oregonians had little trouble in the shuttle hurdles, and gave the afternoon a thrilling climax in the mile relay. In this event, the Webfoot team took an early lead that made it impossible for Oregon State's captain, Tommy Blair, to pull out of the slump from the anchor position. This was perhaps Oregon's most creditable performance of the day.

Duck Netmen Blast

(Continued from page six) have matches scheduled. The two varsity clubs, according to the opponent yardstick method, should be rated evenly as both have defeated Idaho 5-2 and both won from the Cougars by a 4-3 score.

Frosh rankings place Fred Howard No. 1. Howard was burned on the hands with an acetylene torch recently but is all ready for action now. Art Damschen, No. 2; John Jensen, No. 3; Nick Reed, No. 4; and Hugh Crawford, No. 5, complete

An interesting rumor floats around the Igloo. It's been floating for some time now, but it just now occurred to us that you might be interested in hearing it. It is, to wit, that Manny Vezie filed an application for the head football coaching job here at the University of Oregon.

We Smell Something

It's just a rumor, I repeat, but it's interesting, and worth a little speculation. If there is any truth in it, we feel grieved to think that no mention was made of it in publicity releases. There's a smell somewhere.

We're not trying to open this coaching discussion again.

It took Oregon a week and two athletic meetings to get Warren and we're perfectly happy with the choice.

But if Vezie did file an application, and our info comes from a reliable source, we don't like it. He was a popular guy with the players. He's a darn good coach, too. If you care for any proof on that you might run your memory back to the football season and a couple of gents called Russ Nowling and Tony Crish. They were both products of Vezie's coaching, and mighty good looking products, too. We'll leave you with that though and creep on to another peeve.

And Hoyman, Too

Take Mike Hoyman, and nine-tenth of the colleges in the country would like to take him as a swimming coach, and consider his position here.

This will probably burn you just like it did us when we heard it. Mike worked here as a swimming coach for a good many years and turned out some pretty fair teams. Know what he got for his coaching labors? Not one slim dime.

Oh, he got some return for his labors, though. Yes, he got credit for teaching a three-hour P.E. class. Any university can afford to hire winning coaching for that kind of money.

Getting Back to Baseball

The column isn't feeling so sharp this afternoon, so you'll have to excuse the blasts. We spent the afternoon down on that mud puddle they call a ball field watching the Ducks paddle past the floundering Idaho Vandals in what was billed as a ball game.

There were a few things we liked. First, that Oregon won; second, that the game was over at 5:25 so we could go home and take a hot bath; and third, a few of the plays which might be interesting to you.

There was that triple of Kirsch's in the first inning. Little Donny Boy blasted a screaming drive far out into the pond that is center field. He went swirling around first, took about four steps for second and slipped and fell on his right ear.

Last Ball in the Shrubbery

The center fielder in the meantime was searching diligently in some shrubbery in center field trying to find the ball. So Kirsch picks himself up and gets well on his way to third before the very puzzled Vandal can find the ball.

Then there was Carney's catch in the fifth. The Vandals had filled the bases with one away and Dale Clark clouts a long drive far out into Carney's district. It had home run scribbled all over it but Carney backed up to the edge of the rock pile that lies behind left field on that very fine ball field, and pulls the drive in over his shoulder.

Some guy on the Idaho bench pipes up, "What is that guy? A stunt man from a circus?"

Nice Guy, Guy Wicks

We also liked Guy Wicks, Idaho coach, because he's got more pep than any man we've seen for some time. The Idaho boys can also take a licking without crying. Some of the fans were razzing the boys and asking how the potatoes were this year. A smart reply came back thusly: "We've quit raising potatoes; it's sugar beets, now. Sugar shortage."

Genial Mr. Wicks does not like to have a man strike out with a bat on his shoulder and could be heard saying such very emphaticall yseveral times. Which reminds us, after seeing the job of umpiring done yesterday, wouldn't it be nice if Spec Burke could drop around today and ump the game?

And before you start booing the Idaho boys today, remember, they played a double header with Washington Saturday, Oregon yesterday and today and then move on for Oregon State Friday and Saturday. Pity 'em.
