

Council Begins War Program

The University's faculty defense committee swung into action last weekend. This time their moves were designed to aid the students and the nation at the same time.

Keynoting the committee's latest move is the window display in the Co-op store. The window, designed by Dr. C. F. Kossack, campus adviser for deferment classifications, Dr. Warren D. Smith, member of the faculty defense committee, and E. K. True, instructor in architecture, graphically illustrates the opportunities offered by the various branches of the service, together with the qualifications demanded for enlistment in the various programs.

Committee Members

Members of the committee are Dr. Howard R. Taylor, head of the University defense council, Dr. Smith, Wilbur P. Riddlesbarger, Col. Robert M. Lyon, Dean

Karl W. Onthank, Dr. C. B. Beall, C. M. Hulten, Dr. Kossack, and James C. Stovall. These men will visit the various living organizations during the noon and dinner hours today, Wednesday and Thursday to interpret the charts and answer any questions that the students may have. Any further information may be obtained by making appointments with the individual members of the group.

Changes considered

Dr. Taylor warned that even though the graph was based on the latest information available, it is possible that subsequent orders may make it out of date, however, the councilors will be informed of any changes.

Referring to last night's meeting, Dr. Taylor said, "The council's main purpose in this action is to (1) show the student where the best opportunities lie, and (2) place the student where he can serve his country best."

'Boarders' Warned... Town Trips Banned

By MARJORIE YOUNG

Warning of a last chance for the traditional mortar board ball on the UO campus was sounded yesterday at the heads of houses meeting by Hazel P. Schwering, dean of women. A new rule will prohibit individual girls from taking the boy friend down town for dinner, according to Alice Macduff, assistant dean of women.

Houses may schedule group dinners at restaurants only if there is proper chaperonage, according to the new rule.

Decorations for the women's ball, will of necessity be simple, said Billie Christensen, president of Mortar board, since a high school music festival will occupy the Igloo until 6 p.m., May 16, date set for the dance.

"We'll probably have a couple of potted palms for decorations," Miss Christensen said, "but we feel that people will enjoy the dance more at the Igloo event without elaborate decorations, than they would in Gerlinger."

Committees announced by Miss Christensen and Elizabeth Steed were: tickets, programs and publicity, Helen Angell; patrons, patronesses and orchestra, Billie Christensen and Elizabeth Steed; Decorations and refreshments; Hope Hughes.

Playing for the ball will be Art Holman's band.

Military Moms Get UO Reply

By BOB EDWARDS

Shu Yasui, freshman in science, of Japanese ancestry, has prepared a letter in reply to the resolution submitted by the Military Service Mothers club to President Roosevelt and General DeWitt, of the Ninth Corps Area Defense Council.

The first point of the resolution retold the long-disproved rumor that Japanese pilots at Pearl Harbor wore University of Oregon rings.

No Japanese Students

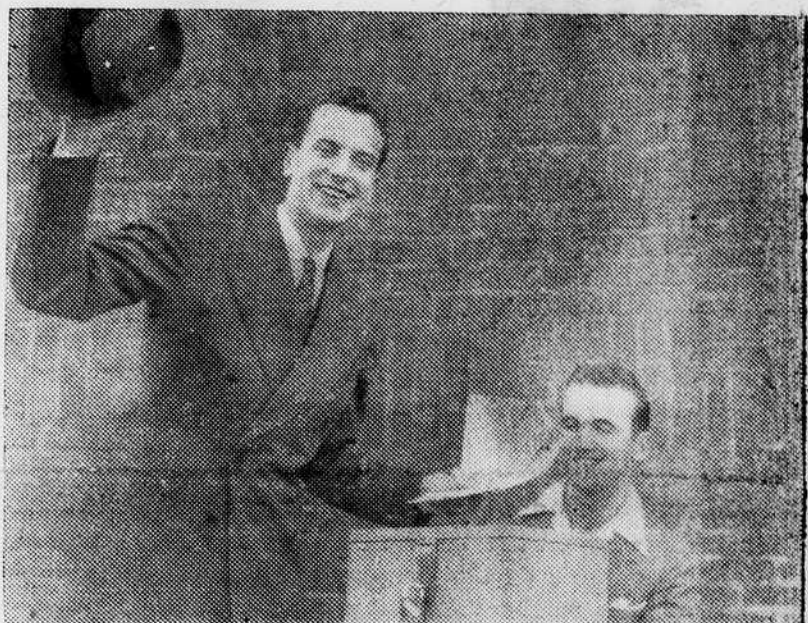

Yasui brought out the point that there are no Japanese students at the University at the present time since the only Japanese national on the campus at the outbreak of the war has long since been in the custody of the F.B.I. Students of Japanese ancestry are American citizens and could not carry out sabotage and other subversive activities as the resolution stated, for their government, since they are Americans.

He protested the condemnation of all persons of Japanese ancestry for, "if people did that, they could condemn all Catholics for being pro-axis because of men like Father Coughlin."

Yasui Recalls

Yasui recalled moments of his life in his home town, Hood River, Oregon, and many experiences there that showed that he was an American, not a foreigner. Yasui was president of his junior high

'Hee Hee' Flunks, Flaunts

By BARBARA YOUNGER

Back in '31 there was a little Japanese boy running around the campus, not studying very hard, and flunking psych and German. Charles Hisao Yoshii wasn't a very good student and not many of his professors remember much about him today, but they're hearing a lot about him and from him, too.

Out of Japan, crossing the Pacific, passing by the valiant men of MacArthur, whistling by fateful Wake island, and going through well-remembered Pearl Harbor, come ether waves carrying the voice of Hisao Yoshii. (He's dropped the English Charles.)

Earning the name of Lord Hee Hee, Yoshii is telling his birth-land to go to the Japanese version of the "hot place" from 8:30 to 11 p.m. daily.

Born in Oregon

Yoshii was born in Banks, Oregon, and was educated at Glen-coe grade school and Franklin high school in Portland. His mother and father were still living in
