

War Slashes Styles In Men's Fashions

The effect of war on clothes will be felt increasingly during the coming months because many plants are devoting as much as fifty percent of their output to government orders.

In the manufacturing of shirts, for instance, new patterns and weaves will be introduced as usual, but the variety of color models will remain the same with the largest production on the most popular ones now in demand. This means that there will still be, for the present at least, most of the old college favorites such as the oxford button-down collar shirts in blue and white, the plain white broadcloth shirt with the regular Hitt collar and a few models of the Sussex type wide-spread and longer point collar.

All Types of Shirts

There is at present plenty of all types of shirts available, but the coming seasons may bring a decrease in patterns, the elimination of the breast pocket, fewer pins, and it is conceivable that French cuffs will go by the board. Even ocean pearl buttons on shirts are getting scarce and will probably be replaced by an all-plastic button. The average consumer, faced with these changes and adjustments all along the line, will probably take them in his stride without, too many complaints, providing, of course, that workmanship and tailoring remain at high standards.

Wool sox are still available and there are plenty of them in the shops in all colors and designs. The plaids are as popular as ever and there seems to be an increase in solid colors, dark blue, black, brown, and shades of yellow and tan.

There has been lots of talk around the last few months about the effect of the war on suits, and to what extent substitutes and re-processed wool will be introduced into woollens and worsteds. Now that this move has definitely come men should remember that the manufacturers will give them the best quality possible under Washington regulations. These fabrics will not be as good as one hundred percent woolen materials, but for the period of the emergency they will have to do.

Restrictions on changes in wearing apparel have now been laid down, with the certain results that were expected. The cuff on the trouser leg serves no useful purpose. It will be eliminated for the present and the same holds true for patch pockets, belts on coats, the double-breasted suit and the vest.

Many men have not worn vests for years, substituting when desired the slip-over sleeveless sweater in solid shades of wool which go with the suit. This is an English custom, and as we have taken the slacks and sport coat, so now perhaps is the time to adopt the sweater for good and all.

Uni High Gets Libe Majority

Congratulations to the University high school. During the past three years graduates of this school have taken first place in the undergraduates' private libraries which are entered into contest at the University Library day. In 1940 first went to Gerald Huestis, 1941, Donald Treadgold, and this year to John F. Spear.

In the graduate collection of libraries, first place went to John Gross and second to Oson Ranny.

The Sixth Annual Library Day, sponsored by the Association of Patrons and Friends of the University of Oregon Library, took place May 2 and 3.

The annual dinner held in connection with Library day had as its principal speaker, Dr. James David Hart, associate professor of English at the University of California in Berkeley.

Portland Man to Speak To Law School Seniors

Speaker for the law school senior banquet will be Carl E. Davidson, Portland attorney, according to K. J. O'Connell, associate professor of law. The banquet will be held at the Anchorage at 6:30, May 29.

Attorney Davidson is a specialist on tax law and is a University of Oregon graduate.

Grads Orders

the sidewalk extending southward from McArthur court toward Eighteenth street.

In case the weather is bad, all candidates will form in line inside the south and west corridors of the court.

Candidates for advanced degrees, including Ph.D., Ed.D., J.D., and master's degrees of all kinds, and candidates for certificates in public health nursing, and social work certificates will form processions in the east corridor of McArthur court whether the weather is good or bad.

All candidates for advanced degrees of master of arts or Sciences or J.D., must appear at McArthur court Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock for a brief rehearsal of the ceremony of receiving the degree and diploma. The hoods should be brought at that time.

Women candidates have been asked by the dean of women's office not to wear corsages on their academic costume at commencement since it is not considered in keeping with the extreme formalit yof the occasion.

Speaker

Bishop Bruce Baxter of the Portland area, Methodist church, will give the address at the bacalaureate service. Bishop Baxter was formerly president of Willamette university. Music for the occasion will be by the University Singers, directed by Dean Theodore Kratt of the school of music.

"The University and the War of Survival," will be the subject of President Donald Erb's address which will be given at commencement.

This year the medical school is holding a separate commencement. This plan and changes in the usual order of exercises are expected to speed up the program considerably.

Cadet Captain Hall

A former University student, Jack C. Hall, was named captain of cadets at the air force's primary training detachment at the Ryan School of Aeronautics, last Wednesday. The honor was held not long ago by another Oregonian, Jim Kisselburgh, a former Oregon State football star.

Dr. Will Durant, philosopher and author, speaking at University of Pennsylvania, said he believes President Roosevelt will be re-elected to his fourth term in 1944.

Texas' first aerodynamics research laboratory is being set up at the University of Texas, as part of the school's newly-established graduate program in aeronautical engineering.

Library Gets Valsetz Book

Who hasn't heard of Dorothy Anne Hobson and her "Valsetz Star"? A nine-year-old girl founded a newspaper that became world known, chuckled over by geniuses, quoted by thousands, and subscribed to by millions.

The University library recently received two first edition books of the collections of her famous editorials, one of which encloses an autographed snapshot of herself. The preface of this book was written by Marshall Dana, managing editor of the Oregon Journal.

Mr. Dana remarks that although Dorothy published her paper only four years, "when she retired at the age of 12, she ranked with the most conspicuous journalists Oregon has produced."

Phi Delta Phi

Charles M. Hulten, associate professor of journalism, led the discussion at a recent meeting of Phi Delta Phi, legal honorary. Subject for the evening was "The Right of Privacy."

Ferry hall, men's dormitory at Washington State college, has been evacuated to make room for a special detachment of 150 air corps men from Geiger field, Spokane.

UO Library Receives Work on Tibet Lamas

Second in outstanding books received by the library during recent term is the book titled "Objects from the Tibetan Lamaism," from the collection of Jacques Marchais.

This book contains reproductions of Tibetan Ritual objects. It was edited by Jacques Marchais, photographic work done by Colten Photo, engraving by Mercury Photo Engraving, and it was printed by the Comet Press, Inc.

Tests by the University of Michigan engineering research department have shown that poor spark plugs often waste as much as one gallon of gasoline in ten.
