

Men Advised to Join Reserves

UO Situation Now Labeled As 'Alarming'

"The situation has become alarming."

This was the statement made by Dr. C. F. Kossack, campus adviser for deferment classifications, yesterday regarding the indifferent attitude taken by nineteen year old students as to the importance of enlistment in the reserve ranks which promise deferment to continue in college.

Enlistment in any reserve classification is dependent upon the student's being registered in college. With the close of the University next week, those students who are not planning on attending a summer session will be unable to enlist in any of the ranks until the opening of fall term.

Dr. Erb Advises

Dr. Donald M. Erb, University president, said Wednesday:

"I wish to emphasize the need for students to investigate the possibilities of reserve enlistments in the various armed forces of the United States before leaving school this term.

"In particular I suggest that students who have not yet registered for selective service should look into these opportunities so that they may adjust their courses of study to meet the various educational requirements for enlistments.

"If this is done we can in some measure eliminate the difficulties students are having trying to find their place in the defense program as well as having the University play a more vital part in the war effort."

Ensign Fred Whittlesey, Jr., USNR, will be on the campus today to meet with all men who are interested in the Navy's deferment plans. All sophomores, and nineteen year old freshmen who are planning to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the Navy must see Ensign Whittlesey before he leaves, as this will be their last chance before the close of the term. Ensign Whittlesey will address all interested men in 207 Chapman at 11 a.m. today.

For Air Corps

Men who intend to enlist in the Army Air Corps reserves for ground duty and who lack the required mathematics and physics credits must see Dr. Kossack in his office, 107 Deady, this week. Provision has been made in the summer session curricula to permit the student to receive a full year's physics and mathematics training in the summer session.

The executive council will appoint a new student union chairman and sophomore man representative to the rally squad at a meeting at 4 o'clock Friday in ASUO President Les Anderson's office.

Absent at last night's meeting were: Marge Dibble, Walt Dickinson, Steve Worth, and Jim Benison.

UO to Honor Three Alums

Honorary degrees will be conferred on three prominent Oregon alumni—Mrs. Jessie Honeyman, Dr. Esther Lovejoy, and Edison Marshall—at commencement, it was announced last night by Dr. Donald M. Erb, University president.

Mrs. Honeyman, of Portland, will receive an M.A. in public service for her contributions toward "keeping Oregon green" by campaigns directed toward conservation, reforestation, and forest fire fighting.

Dr. Lovejoy, one of the first women to be graduated from the University of Oregon Medical school, will be honored with a doctor of science degree. For some years she has been chairman of the board of women's hospital in New York City.

Mr. Marshall, world-famed for his short stories and novels, will receive a master of science degree.

Scholarships Filed

According to reports from the office of the dean of women, all fellowships and scholarships given this year are now on file.
