

Dance Ends Rush Week; Greeks Announce Pledges

After a frenzied five days of frantic rushing and toothsome smiles, rush week ended last night with the annual pledge dance, where all Gerlinger-bound nuggets danced hot, California, and otherwise to the inevitable music of Art Holman.

The Kwama's deft hands were felt in the enlarged reproductions of sorority and fraternity pledge pins which decorated the hall.

Yesterday rush-weary Greeks and Greekesses packed their trunks, grips, and unstrung tennis rackets to entrain for their chosen citadels.

UO Sorority Women Tackle Former House-boys' Jobs

By BETTY LOU SIEGMAN

Sorority members became "house-boys" during rush week as "activity girl" took on a new meaning.

The shortage of male labor was so great that house-boys were not used at all. Several of the houses have reported they will still need two or three more house-boys and others for odd jobs. A few, however, claim they have enough help signed up for the time being.

Shortage Acute

Restaurants and campus store are also faced with the labor shortage problem. The Co-op store has approximately half as much help as it needs. The store usually starts out the year with 40 employees. This year only 20 reported for work.

According to Miss Janet Smith, employment secretary, only seven men had signed for jobs the first of the week. In former years 100 was a conservative number of job-hunting students. Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel administration, who is in charge of NYA, says that with rush week over and the possibility of some men returning to school late, the shortage won't be as great within a few weeks.

Stores Need Help

After having only two waiters on opening day, the College Side is gradually returning to its normal number of about 20. Taylor's is shorthanded and recently reported they could use two more boys and possibly one girl. The Lemon-O, which usually employs four or five boys had only one during last week. Mainly kitchen help but also some waitresses are needed at the Anchorage, while Burns' ice-cream store had so few employed two days ago they couldn't handle the rush-hour business.

Don't start feeling blue
'Cause your females are few,
And you sadly are lacking big moments.
Be thankful like me
That we're not OSC,
And have to compete with can- tonments.

Freshmen Face Week of Fun

By MARJORIE ROBINSON

Perhaps the busiest four days of the entire school year, from a "frosh" standpoint, will get under way today—Wednesday, September 23—when newcomers to the University of Oregon campus face the ordeal of Freshman Week.

A hearty welcome from Dr. Donald M. Erb, University president, at 7:30 tonight in the music auditorium, will be the first step toward making freshmen feel at home in their new surroundings. All frosh men interested in the University's military reserve program will remain to receive information from Dr. Carl Kossack, chairman of the military placement committee, on army, navy, marine, and air corps reserves.

New Students

All new students are required to take a placement examination as part of the preparation for entrance to the University. Physical examinations begin Wednesday and continue through Saturday.

The Associated Women Students (AWS) will hold an assembly for frosh women Thursday afternoon at four o'clock in the music auditorium. The same evening, an assembly sponsored by the ASU (Associated Students, University of Oregon) will fete new students and bring them face to face with important campus personalities. This assembly will also take place in the music auditorium.

Consult Advisers

Kenneth Shumaker, chairman of lower division advisers, urges students to discuss important problems with faculty members before and after registration instead of during busy registration periods Friday and Saturday.

Climaxing Freshman Week, old-timers will again meet and greet each other at the Hello Dance Saturday night in McArthur court at 8 o'clock.

Annual Evades Wartime Bans

The 1943 Oregonana will be about the only thing on the University campus to have successfully evaded the clamp of wartime restrictions.

Evidently Mr. Henderson holds a soft spot in his heart for the seven-time All-American champion, for this year's issue will include all the prize-winning features of last year's book plus a mile-high stack of added attractions.

Feeling no inclination to jump on the nationwide price-soaring stratosphere, Oregonana prices are the same as last year—$4, if purchased with a student athletic card, $5 without the athletic card. An easy, "pay as you get richer" plan is available for those few who were not fortunate enough to have wielded a torch in the shipyards this summer.

The 1943 Oregonana will be dedicated to the boys in our armed forces and will feature a two-page, three-color dedicatory section. Multi-colored sections will be featured throughout the book, and added emphasis will be given to candid camera shots.

Glickman Named Publicity Director

Harry Glickman, sophomore in journalism, was named as athletic publicity director to succeed Bruce Hamby, now with the Oregonian, announced Anson B. Cornell, athletic manager.

Glickman, former sports writer for the Eugene Register-Guard and Daily Emerald, will handle the job from McArthur court and not accompany the team on any trips.
